ENGLAND PLUNGED IN DEEPEST GLOOM.

King's Symptoms Worse, and Condition Declared Critical.

Sovereign Says "It Is Over, But I Think I Have Done My Duty."

LONDON, May 6.—"Well, it is all over, but I think have done my duty."

These words fell from the lips of King Edward VII in a waking interval late this afternoon. His majesty's condition was declared critical by the attending physicians, and all members of the royal family were summoned to the palace.

Gloom settled over the city and provinces following the issuance of tonight's distressing bulletin, which said that His Majesty's symptoms became worse during the day, and that the king's condition was critical. The bulletin was issued from Buckingham palace at 6:15, and was signed by Doctors Laking, Reid, Powell and Dawson.

An atmosphere of great depression surrounded Buckingham Palace throughout the day. A bulletin describing the King's condition, and which five eminent physicians now in attendance issued shortly before noon, while vague in terms inspired profound gloom throughout the city. It was generally construed to mean that the outlook is not at all favorable. The suddenness of the transition from yesterday morning, when the King was receiving politicians to the present, when it is believed he is critically ill, has shocked the country. For the moment business and politics are at a standstill.

The Prince of Wales arrived at the palace at 10 a. m., and entered almost unobserved. In addition to the three physicians who were in attendance throughout the night, and are now spending the day at the palace, Sir Francis Lakin, Sir James Reid and Sir Richard Douglas Powell, the specialist, there were summoned this morning Dr. Bertrand Dawson and Dr. St. Clair Thomson. All the medical party remained within call of the sick chamber.

The first official news given out early today indicated an improvement, those with the king having been deceived by the fact that he had rested quietly throughout the night. The news was received with cheers by anxious crowds gathered throughout the city. This bulletin stated that His Majesty's condition remained much the same. The subsequent examination developed that the patient's bronchial tubes, instead of being in better condition, were more seriously affected after the night's sleep than they were yesterday. Thereupon a bulletin was issued, saying:

"The King passed a comparatively quiet night, but the symptoms have not improved, and His Majesty's condition gives rise to grave anxiety."

The doctors announced that the next bulletin would be issued at 6:30 o'clock this evening.

The day was bright and sunny, and before noon a great crowd was loitering in front of the palace in the vicinity of the new memorial Victoria building and many carriages gathered in St. James Park. From early morning, when workmen on the way to the scenes of their labors stopped to inquire from the police at the palace gates, concerning the king's condition, the throng increased steadily, until the police were compelled to keep the crowds moving. Only officials were admitted to the palace precincts. So absorbed were the people in His Majesty's illness that the arrival of the Prince of Wales attracted practically no attention. Early in the afternoon the members of the diplomatic corps called and signed the visitors' book, as did many other prominent personages. All left the palace betraying by their expressions the fears entertained.

"Very bad," said the Archbishop of Canterbury, with a solemn shake of his head, as he emerged from the palace gate and was questioned regarding His Majesty's condition.

The king's age and corpulence and the well known weakness of the heart, which has resulted in several attacks resembling vertigo during the past two or three years, which were attributed chiefly to the constant smoking of strong cigars, have served to weaken his power of resistance to disease.

The king's condition has been guarded with much care, and the first intimation that anything was amiss was his failure to meet the queen, who returned from the Continent last evening. It has been the king's invariable rule to be present on the queen's arrival from any out-of-town journey, and his absence last evening was made the subject of general comment immediately it was noted.

The queen hurried to the palace, and soon after the public learned by an official announcement that the king had been ill two days. The fact that his sickness had been thus concealed from public notice increased the alarm when once it became generally known.

The king suffered from a similar attack at Biarritz, owing to the inclement weather and cold winds, but it was supposed that he had completely recovered, especially as he attended the opera at Covent Garden within three hours of his arrival in London from Biarritz last Wednesday.

Thursday the king had a busy day. He gave an audience to Field Marshal Lord Kitchener and Prime Minister Asquith and visited the Royal Academy. Friday, also, he gave several audiences, entertained Mr. and Mrs. Herbert J. Gladstone at a farewell luncheon on their departure for South Africa, and visited the theatre in the evening. This social activity tended to reassure the public mind, but it was noticed that while the king was viewing the pictures at the Royal Academy he looked pale and fatigued, and lacked his customary zest and sprightliness, and the members of his entourage feared that this might betoken a return of throat and chest trouble.

The king spent the week-end at Sandringham, with the object of combating the threatened attack, and returned apparently better, but the sudden changes in the weather this week were very trying to His Majesty, and finally compelled him to keep indoors. He still attended to state business, however, and granted audiences, including, among others, an audience to Whitelaw Reid, American ambassador, and Lord Roberts. Tuesday, Wednesday he entertained Grand Duke Michael at luncheon; in fact, it was only yesterday that his physicians were able to induce the king, with great reluctance, to keep to his bedroom and take a complete rest.

The bulletin issued at 7:30 o'clock last evening showed that the eminent specialist, Dr. Richard Douglas Powell, had been called in. He with the king's physicians, Sir Francis Lakin and Sir James Reid, signed the bulletin, which read:

"The king is suffering from an attack of bronchitis, and has been confined to his rooms for two days. His Majesty's condition causes some anxiety."

The king has been in good spirits, despite his illness, and, in addition to long visits from members of the royal family, he received in audience yesterday morning Lord Islington, the newly appointed commander-in-chief of New Zealand, and other colonial officials.

A court circular sent out about 8 o'clock last evening stated that His Majesty was unable to meet the queen because he was suffering from a severe cold. The Prince of Wales has been in constant attendance the past two days, and last evening the Duchess of Argyll was summoned to the palace.

His Majesty's apartments are on the first floor, overlooking the grounds and Constitutional Hill. Every precaution has been taken to prevent disturbing the patient. The quadrangle of the palace and the carriage approaches have been covered with peat to deaden the noise.

The prospect of the death or long illness of the sovereign confronts the country at the worst possible time in years. From a political and other points of view such an outcome would be practically disastrous. The greatest constitutional crisis in generations hangs over Great Britain. King Edward is familiar with all the features of the situation, which would be particularly trying to his successor, who, on the threshold of his reign, would be called upon to deal with the question of employing the authority of the crown to curb the powers of the peers.

From a social and business standpoint the monarch's demise would be equally unfortunate. The social season, when families are flocking from the country to London and the merchants counting on a big business, is just beginning, and was expected this year to be the most brilliant of many seasons. The king's death would throw the court and country into mourning, and end the social activities. Incidentally, Mr. Roosevelt's visit, which all England has anticipated as a unique event, might be cancelled, or at least be made extremely quiet.

Consols, which to a great extent are a barometer of the business feeling, dropped from 81 11-16, when the market closed yesterday, to 81 at noon today. Leading financiers, when interviewed, expressed the opinion that the monarch's illness or death would have only a temporary effect on stocks generally, and the decline already recorded reports the marking down of quotations by brokers in anticipation of the selling which usually follows any startling news.

The stock exchange was much excited in the early hours by conflicting rumors, one of which had it that the King had died. The market opened weak under offerings, but the general tone soon improved when the sensational report was disproved. The

ROOSEVELT GIVEN DEGREE OF PH. D.

Third Foreigner in Century So Honored by Norway.

King and Queen Go with Him to Train for Stockholm.

CHRISTIANIA, Norway, May 6.—King Frederick's university conferred on Theodore Roosevelt today the degree of doctor of philosophy. It was the third time in the history of a century that the degree has been given a foreigner.

The exercises occurred in the amphitheatre of the university. King Haakon entered with Mr. Roosevelt at his right, and faced a notable assemblage, including the premier and other members of the cabinet, the Nobel prize committee, the diplomatic corps, the faculty of the university and many persons distinguished in civil life.

The dean of the faculty of history and philosophy made an address, in which he said that Mr. Roosevelt had already left the earth and was residing on Olympus with Jupiter and Apollo, and that it was scarcely kind to drag him down among the mortals. He likened Colonel Roosevelt to a rushing human engine, difficult to follow and making it difficult, amid the clouds of smoke, to discern precisely the manner of man he is. Some see a winged angel and others a modern devil with claws. In sketching the colonel's career the dean found the "Winning of the West" his most instructive work. He agreed with others that Mr. Roosevelt is a man who has learned to use the capacities and powers which in most men lie dormant. He has converted his capacity into energies. . .

In reply Mr. Roosevelt said it does not make much difference what capacities a man has. It is important, rather, what he does with them. The thing is to get the job done.

King Haakon and Mr. Roosevelt had another long talk before an open fire in the palace this morning. Outside the rain fell and the air was cold. The former President regards the monarch as a thoroughly good fellow, and his royal companion unmistakably enjoys the society of the distinguished visitor, his brilliant power of conversation and the many amusing stories of his varied experiences. As a member of the king's household said: "They have hit it off wonderfully together."

Mr. Roosevelt's first forenoon engagement was with a throat specialist, who sprayed the overtaxed organs which all but failed him yesterday, and prescribed further treatment.

The weather cleared toward noon and a great crowd gathered in the streets leading from the palace to the university for a sight of Mr. Roosevelt as he went to the latter institution to receive his degree. The bestowal of the degree was the only feature of today's program. Later in the day Mr. Roosevelt and his family were conveyed by a royal train to the frontier, where he will leave at 6 o'clock for Stockholm, the capital of Sweden.

The newspapers today comment approvingly on Mr. Roosevelt's peace program as set forth in his address of yesterday. They consider his suggestions as those of a practical statesman, and, while containing nothing strikingly original, say that they were worked out with unusual lucidity and convincingness.

Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt spent the afternoon driving about the capital with the king and queen, who later accompanied them to the railway station, where they took a special train for Stockholm. The Roosevelts were cheered by a crowd at the station as they left.

TAFT WARNED BALLINGER.

President Advised Caution Against Driving Him Out.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—A warning given by President Taft to Secretary Ballinger to be careful and not do anything which would drive Gifford Pinchot out of the public service was unexpectedly disclosed today while the Secretary was on the stand in the Ballinger-Pinchot investigation.

The Secretary read a letter from the President, dated at Beverly, September 13, 1909, in which Mr. Taft said that Pinchot's "weakness is his inability to credit high and honorable motives to those who differ with him as to his method of doing things when he is pursuing a worthy object with all the enthusiasm of his nature. I know him well and am very fond of him personally and mean, if possible, in spite of this defect to preserve his great ability, valuable experience and patriotic, disinterested zeal for the benefit of the public service.

"Please, therefore, advise your subordinates to be very particular not to involve Mr. Pinchot in this matter and to rest silent in view of the complete acquittal they receive from my letter.

"Should it be necessary, as it is not unlikely, to submit all this record to Congress, I shall be glad to have your authority and that of your subordinates to leave out of your answers any references to Pinchot or the part he took in bringing Glavis's report to my attention."

Secretary Ballinger concluded his direct testimony at the hearing this afternoon with the statement that his every official act had been with the sole idea of fulfilling his trust. "I defy anyone to put his finger on anything that I have done while in the public service which was not in line with my trust," he said.

As if in acceptance of the challenge, Mr. Brandeis counsel for L. R. Glavis, one of Ballinger's chief accusers, then took up the cross-examination of the witness. Within five minutes the expected clash between them had taken place and on his very first question Mr. Brandeis had to appeal to the committee to "request" Mr. Ballinger to answer it.

The question involved Postmaster General Hitchcock as "the official pie distributer" of the administration, and Mr. Brandeis wanted to know why Mr. Ballinger wired Chief of Field Division Schwartz to wait until he had talked with Hitchcock before he made the appointment of 10 special agents to be employed in the Alaskan coal cases investigation. Mr. Ballinger said that fact had no political significance and declined to answer more explicitly.

A wrangle between Mr. Brandeis and the members of the committee ensued and the result was a record vote, by which the committee by a vote of six to five decided that Mr. Ballinger need not answer more fully.

Mr. Ballinger admitted the now famous press interview in which he declared after his return to Washington, subsequent to the publication of Glavis charges, that "he proposed to kill some snakes." He also admitted that he had reference to Glavis, who he had made up his mind "ought to be killed as a snake. He said Glavis "loafed on the job" in conducting the Alaskan cases and that he never thought as much of Glavis's ability as some others in his department did.

Early in the day Mr. Ballinger contradicted two statements made by ex-Secretary Garfield. He testified also that since Pinchot's dismissal there had been a complete reversal of the forestry policy of the government and he said he believed it would keep a great many Americans from emigrating to Canada and would result in the development of many portions of the forest reserves.

THE FLOOR OF THE SUMMER COTTAGE.

(Suburban Life.)

It often happens that the floor of the summer cottage is rough and full of cracks, so that it is not satisfactory even when stained. When this problem meets the owner, it is a good plan to cover that part of the floor which will not be hidden by the rug with canvas, which should be tacked in place smoothly, and then given two or three coatings of good paint, to be followed by an application of varnish stain. This will give an excellent border, and which will answer all the purposes of a hard-wood floor.

PERSONALS.

....Rev. Alexander McLaren, the noted Manchester preacher, died in Edinburg Thursday.

....Horace B. Silliman, the millionaire philanthropist and benefactor of colleges, is dead at his home in Cohoes, N. Y., aged 84 years. He was graduated from Union College in 1846, and a few years ago gave Silliman Hall to his alma mater.

....At the funeral of William E. Burnet of Locust Valley, Long Island, who weighed 568 pounds, the body was placed in a large metallic coffin. No hearse was large enough to carry the coffin and it was carried on a wagon. It took the united efforts of 12 pallbearers to carry the coffin in and out of the church.

....The will of Eli M. Stewart, an eccentric bachelor of Minneapolis, bequeaths $50,000 each to the Home for Aged Women of Minneapolis, to the Home for the Little Sisters of the Poor, Minneapolis, and for a memorial library at Corrina, Minn. The rest of the estate, which is estimated at $6,000,000, is divided among relatives and friends living in Maine, Massachusetts and San Francisco.

....John H. Fahey, editor and publisher of the Boston Traveler for the past seven years, announces that he has sold his interest in that newspaper to A. F. Holden and E. H. Baker of Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Fahey will withdraw as editor and publisher of the paper and president of the Boston Traveler Company in about ten days. Mr. Baker is general manager of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, and Mr. Holden is associated with his father, L. E. Holden, in the ownership of that paper.

....Flags which floated over the principal buildings of Allegan, Mich., last week, in honor of the one hundred and second birthday of Mrs. Hannah McIntosh Cady, were lowered to half-mast later at the announcement of the aged woman's death. She had bent all her strength toward surviving until her birthday, and collapsed when she realized that her ambition had been fulfilled. Mrs. Cady was a Daughter of the American Revolution, and was born in Mantua, Ohio, April 29, 1803.

....The will of Mary E. Brinckerhoff, who died in New York but whose home is in the town of Greenburg, has been filed at White Plains for probate. It is said that the estate will be worth close to $2,000,000. There are more than 50 helps and the legacies include relatives, friends and servants. There is $2,000 left for the care and maintenance of her two pet coach horses, Jessie and Fannie. The bequests include: Metropolitan Museum of Art, $10,000; ..New York Infirmary, $25,000; Barnard College, $50,000; Sleepy Hollow Cemetery, $1,000; executor, cash in lieu of commissions, $25,000; New York Kindergarten, $10,000; coachman, $500; footman, $500; butler and guardian $1,000 each, two maids, $600 each; three nurses, $900.

ONLY ONE BID MADE.

way appropriate to the building and was accepted as the proper thing. He was the lowest bidder on the benches, and Jacob Aronson was the lowest on the cushions and carpets. The figures, number and various other incidents of the bids were read. The contract was awarded to Stoneman for the benches and to Aronson for the cushions and carpets.

The work was done in a satisfactory manner, except that the compartments under the seats were not separated as called for, and the Anthony & Cowell Company would not do anything about it. He would not approve the work as done, with this part not according to contract. Within a few days the company had sent men here, secured admission to the synagogue and put in the compartment divisions, so that now he could say the contract is complete. There is a little extra work, which can be adjusted easily. There had been a difference in the estimate of the carpet, but they had come to an agreement over this, splitting the difference, allowing that 18 more yards than appeared had been used. This might well be.

The work was satisfactory, the Synagogue had received a first-class job at a price which seemed reasonable compared with what furnishings not at all appropriate to the building would have cost. The congregation & the party most interested in having the fund properly administered, and it felt that it had received its money's worth, and had done better than it possibly could have done in any other way. If the contractors made some money it was no concern of the congregation, provided it had received full value for the money spent and it had. He quoted from several local manufacturers' estimates of what would cost to duplicate the work. The estimates were all well above the cost and all agreed that the congregation had a first-class job which harmonized well with the architectural design of the building.

Mr. Mahoney brought up the fact that the committee of the board did not take part in the contract and the opening of the bids. Mr. Nolan, who appeared as counsel, suggested that the city solicitor be asked about this and the city solicitor said the contract was valid under the vote passed by the board without action by the committee. Mr. Nolan said the vote might have been differently worded but as it stood it was not at all necessary for the committee of the board to sign it. All the committee had to do was to see that the contract was carried out and this it appeared, was done at the inspection after the work was completed and the congregation was fully satisfied with it.

Mr. Mahoney claimed that the contract made was illegal, because the committee of the board did not sign it, and therefore the money paid could be recovered by suit. Mr. Nolan suggested that, even if this were so, the money is for the benefit of the congregation, the board simply acting as trustee, and if there had been a slight irregularity and no one suffered the board could overlook the irregularity. After all, the congregation had the right to have the work done to suit it, just as any other congregation in town. It is really their money, even if the board is trustee, and if there was no fraud in the matter it did not seem to make any difference to the board how the money is spent. As a matter of fact, any court would hold the contract as made to be legal and binding.

Mr. Mahoney had something to say about big profits made by the contractors, and Mr. Stoneman showed that he had been at considerable expense in preparation to bid and after receiving the contract. He had one bill of $55 from Mr. Steele and another of $7.50 from Mr. Graham, and told where other money had been spent in an endeavor to secure the contract and to carry it out. It was work which must be done if a bidder wished to be in position to secure a contract. After the sample bench had been built, from his suggestions and at his expense, he was not going to let other dealers come in and use it as a sample for bids; if they wished to bid they had an opportunity to offer samples or benches, as he had done. He did permit Aronson to give a figure on the work, but he beat him out. Titus, or Cottrell, or Walsh, could not do the work; they would be obliged to send to the manufacturers to have it done, just as he had done.

Mr. Aronson, the other bidder; Mr. Engle, Mayor Boyle, Aldermen Shepley and Kelly, all had something to say. Finally things seemed to have reached the bottom, and Mayor Boyle poured oil over the troubled waters by saying there was no intention to attribute any wrong motives, but some talk perhaps thoughtlessly indulged in by one of the contractors had led to a suspicion that perhaps things were not right. The board felt it a duty to investigate. After a thorough going over of all the matters with all the parties concerned, and a consideration of the correspondence in the case, the board felt satisfied and Alderman Shepley's motion to pay $1,200 on the contract when approved by the president of the congregation met general approval. It was proposed to approve such a recommendation at once, but later it was decided to let the matter go until next week, when the approval of the president of the congregation will be in formal shape and the board can order the money paid.

Thus ends a matter which grew from a molehill into a mountain, and back again into a molehill, and finally into nothing but talk, and the board adjourned.

BEFORE THE NAVAL COMMITTEE

Battleship Provision, Re-Organization Plan and Water Supply at Guantanamo Discussed.

Two new battleships of the most advanced type will be carried in the naval appropriation bill which is to be reported by the Senate committee on naval affairs. Objection to the two-battleship program was expressed in the committee by Senators Hale of Maine, and Clapp of Minnesota. Both are opposed to more than one battleship, but the majority of the committee were so clearly in favor of two that beyond the registering of the objection there was little discussion of the matter. The large majority for two battleships in the House of Representatives had the effect of reducing the opposition in the Senate and it is conceded that the bill carrying this provision will be passed by the upper House.

It is the opinion of the members of the Senate committee that the division over the endorsement of the re-organization plan of Secretary Meyer is very close. Proponents of the plan hold that approval of a part if not all of it is certain to be given. Mr. Meyer was before the committee again Thursday and continued his testimony relative to the naval supply fund. Another point which Mr. Meyer took up with the committee referred to the appropriation of $95,000 for a water supply at Guantanamo, Cuba, which was stricken out by the House. In view of the fact that Guantanamo has proved an advantageous place of rendezvous for the fleet, Mr. Meyer is particularly anxious that some means of securing a water supply be devised. At present it is necessary to bring the water to Guantanamo in tanks by train from the interior.

There still remains for the consideration of Congress the personnel bill advocated by Mr. Meyer. Captain Roy Smith will appear before the House naval committee on this subject again today. He already has had two hearings, and has impressed the committee favorably. The committee is deeply interested in the plan and desires to go to the bottom of it. It is possible that the shortage of time will influence the House to take no action at this session, although this is not altogether certain. At any rate, the personnel bill appears to be gaining strength with the committee each day, and Captain Smith's hearings have had a beneficial effect.

RHODE ISLAND MEASURES.

Pension Bills and Resolutions Introduced by Aldrich, Wetmore and Sheffield.

Senator Aldrich has introduced increase of pension bills as follows: Mrs. Mary E. Havens, Washington, R. I., widow of Joseph E. Havens, late paymaster's clerk, in the navy, $12 to $30 per month; Mrs. Anna Hackett, Providence, widow of James K. Huckett, late of Company K, Ninth Rhode Island volunteer infantry, $12 to $36; Mary E. Harris, Providence, widow of Benjamin E. Harris, late of Company E, Eighty-ninth regiment, New York volunteer infantry, $12 to $30; Mrs. Henrietta Jeffery, Providence, widow of John A. Jeffery, late of Company F, Second regiment, Rhode Island volunteer infantry, $12 to $30; William L. Hines, Providence, late of Company K, Veteran Reserve Corps, $12 to $50; Charles L. Dorr, Pawtucket, late of Company D, Second regiment, Massachusetts heavy artillery, $12 to $40; William Holley, Providence, late of Company F, Fourth regiment, Rhode Island volunteer infantry, $12 to $50; John Moore, Providence, late of Company A, Twelfth regiment, Connecticut volunteer infantry, $16 to $40; William A. Monroe, Providence, late of Company G, Second regiment, Rhode Island volunteer infantry, $12 to $30; Reuben H. Rich, Providence, late of Battery G, First Rhode Island volunteer light artillery, $15 to $50; George T. Batchelder, Central Falls, late of Company C, Seventh regiment, Rhode Island volunteer infantry, $15 to $36; Felix McManus, Darby, late of Company B, Second regiment, Rhode Island volunteer infantry, $15 to $30; Mrs. Mary C. Dutcher, Providence, widow of Eghbert S. Dorforth, late of Company D, Seventh regiment, Rhode Island volunteer infantry, $12 to $24; James E. Hudson, East Providence, late of Company I, Seventh regiment, United States volunteer infantry, $20 to $30; Mrs. Abby M. Knight, Johnston, widow of William A. Knight, late of Company E, Fourth Rhode Island volunteer infantry, $12 to $24; Mrs. Caroline W. Tanner, Providence, widow of Daniel B. T. Tanner, late of Battery D, First Regiment, Rhode Island volunteer light artillery, $30 per month; Mrs. Hannah M. Mather, Providence, widow of John F. Mather, late of Company E, Seventy-third regiment, New York volunteer infantry, to $30.

Senator Aldrich has introduced a bill to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Narragansett Pier. The bill stipulates that the appropriation for the site shall not exceed the sum of $10,000 and that the cost of the building shall not be in excess of $15,000.

He has also introduced a bill authorizing the adjustment of the accounts of James R. Kelley, late a captain in the United States army, for arrearages of longevity pay.

Senator Wetmore has introduced petitions as follows: James Hughes and nine other citizens of East Greenwich, favoring the passage of the bill making an appropriation for the extension of the work of the office of public roads, Department of Agriculture, in co-operation with the Postmaster General; Pattern Makers' Association of Providence and vicinity, favoring the passage of the bill to provide for an eight-hour work-day on all government work; Roger Williams Baptist Church of Providence, favoring the enactment of legislation establishing a national department of health; Central Labor Union of Newport favoring the passage of the bill providing for an eight-hour work-day on all Government work.

Senator Wetmore and Representative Sheffield have offered resolutions of the Conanicus Grange No. 1 of Jamestown favoring the establishment of a national department of health and favoring the agricultural extension work in connection with agricultural land-grant colleges.

Senator Wetmore has introduced a bill appropriating $50,000 for the purchase of a site and the erection of a building thereon for the use of the postoffice at Narragansett Pier.

Congressman Sheffield has introduced in the House increase of pension bills, as follows: Mary Denny, Providence, widow of James Denny, Company H, Fourteenth United States infantry, from $12 to $24 per month; William Johnson, Providence, late of Company C, First regiment, Connecticut Calvary, from $12 to $40; Henry A. Reynolds, Providence, late of Company H, Third regiment, New Hampshire volunteer infantry; James F. Buckley, Providence, Company D, Eighteenth regiment, Connecticut volunteer infantry from $12 to $40 per month; Peter Whelan, Providence, Company A, Second regiment, Rhode Island volunteer infantry, from $12 to $50; Mary E. King, Jamestown, widow of Thomas E. King, late of the United States navy, from $12 to $24.

Sarah J. Viall, Providence, widow of Horace T. Viall, late of Companies B and E, Second regiment, Rhode Island volunteer infantry, from $12 to $25 per month; Marguerite D. Pollard, Providence, widow of Captain Joseph Pollard, late of Company H, second regiment, Rhode Island volunteer infantry, $12 to $24.

Mr. Sheffield has also introduced a bill for an original pension to Mary F. Randall, Providence, widow of Nathan P. Randall, late of Company G, Seventh regiment, Massachusetts volunteer infantry.

Mr. Sheffield has offered a resolution from the Kickimuit Grange of Warren, endorsing the bill before Congress for a small federal appropriation to land-grant colleges for the encouragement and support of extension work.

ENGLISH EVERYWHERE.

(Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

The traveler of today, unless he is going to Tibet or Tierra del Fuego, can get along very well with a knowledge of the English language. The farther he goes the more he is surprised at finding that English is really the world tongue. In France and Spain and Italy the American traveler is readily "spotted." He is approached on the streets by those who would, for a consideration, make him feel quite at home. One of his chief worries is to escape the pests who can speak English and who wish to apprise him of the fact. They may not necessarily desire to meet him. Sometimes they are seeking merely to "show off." At any rate they classify distinctly as bores. One may go to Smyrna or Constantinople or Beyrout and still find the streets plentifully full of English speaking nuisances. At Jerusalem he will be fairly flooded with English. He may penetrate even to Damascus, and there find at least a befezzed half dozen who can converse glibly with him, and any number of fluently willing dragomans. He may go to Cairo, and in the shadow of the pyramids he will find him-gowned Bedouins speaking more than passable English. He may go hundreds of miles up the Nile, and may be steered through the locks of the first cataract by frizzly haired Englishmen who take insistent backsheesh in very intelligible terms. He may wander donkey back to the tombs of the kings in the Libyan desert, and be painfully disillusioned by hordes of concise information or explanation by some barefooted, dusky tent dweller.

"THE ROSARY."

Delightful Story Whose Interest Depends Solely on the Love Theme. by Florence L. Barclay.

"The Rosary," by Florence L. Barclay, will delight the reader who cares for a story whose interest depends solely on the love theme. It is not a tale of adventure, a detective story or a problem novel, but the romance of two young persons who love much and suffer many things before their joy is complete. The character drawing is excellent, while the tone is uplifting and inspiring, a strong religious note running through it. The book takes its title from the well known song of that name:

"The hours I spend with thee, dear heart,
Are as a string of pearls to me;
I count them over, ev'ry one apart,
My rosary—my rosary.

"Each hour a pearl, each pearl a prayer,
To still a heart in absence wrung;
I tell each bead until the end, and there—
A cross is hung!

"O memories that bless and burn!
O barren gain and bitter loss!
I kiss each bead and strive at last to learn
To kiss the cross * * * to kiss the cross."

The story hinges on this song, for it is in the singing of it that a woman's soul is revealed and the love of one man for that one woman bursts into being. That song is never forgotten and both find that it is their own experience—the exquisite love, the bitter cross, "the memories that bless and burn."

The Honorable Jane Champion is the heroine—a heroine without beauty. Plain of face, massive in figure, almost masculine in her ways and manner, Jane is no pretty woman. She possesses something far better—a beautiful soul, nobility of character, great tenderness of spirit—and these graces show forth in her face and in her daily life. While at a house party given by her aunt, the Duchess of Meldrum, a great crisis comes into her life. A famous singer being unable to be present and sing at an entertainment, Jane takes her place, to please her aunt. As the result of her song love comes into her life with a rush and abandon which intoxicates her. For once she finds that she is first with some one else, she who has always taken second place. Jane, conscious of her plainness of face, does what she thinks at the time is right, although it makes her heart bleed, but years later she sees that it was selfishness and a lack of trust in her lover which led her to do the cruel thing. Jane is punished for it and suffers sorrowfully, but in the end has her reward, the result of self-sacrifice and loving devotion.

Garth Delmain is an artist, a passionate lover of beauty. Underneath his gay and lively boyishness, is a strong man, capable of intense joy or suffering. When he finds the woman he loves he pours out his heart's affection on her. Jane's decision is a cruel blow to him, but it does not sting him into any foolish action. Instead, it develops him wonderfully, and he makes greater progress in his art because of it. A terrible accident befalls him, and he can paint no longer; but another gift, silent as it was, comes to the surface and music takes the place of art. Before this is accomplished, however, Jane confesses her fault, and a reconciliation is effected.

Other characters include the Duchess of Meldrum, an energetic old lady, who with Tommy, her macaw, makes things rather lively; Deryck Brand, a noted physician, who is Jane's devoted friend and helps her in her difficult task, and Paullus Lister, a beautiful American girl, who understands Jane and Delmain perfectly.

NO HATLESS CROQUET.

Croquet is to have a great vogue this summer, and is it not going to be the correct thing to play it hatless. Indeed, Madame Grundy decrees fetching costumes for the game, which, being a quiet one, lends itself to frills and furbelows. The coming summer girl who likes to be athletic may be as vigorous as she chooses in the morning hours, but in the late afternoon she is expected to play croquet in a smart muslin frock, with a big picture hat to complete her toilet. While she may at first scorn croquet, she is sure to play it if it is "the thing," and she is quite sure to look her best doing it, for the game gives ample opportunity for the display of grace as well as for looking one's prettiest in dainty summer attire.

BACK GIVES OUT.

Plenty of Newport Readers Have This Experience.

You tax the kidneys—overwork them—

They can't keep up the continual strain.

The back gives out—it aches and pains;

Urinary troubles set in.

Don't wait longer—take Doan's Kidney Pills.

Newport people tell you how they act.

J. B. Caswell, rear of 49 Third Street, Newport, R. I., says: "I was a victim of kidney complaint for a long time. Any strain on the muscles of my back caused pains through different parts of my body and often it was all I could do to straighten after stooping. My kidneys were very weak and I had to rise four or five times at night to pass the kidney secretions. Hearing a great deal about the wonderful cures Doan's Kidney Pills were making in similar cases, I resolved to try them and procured a box at Wright & Hay's Drug Store. This remedy acted directly on my kidneys and by restoring these organs to a condition of health, brought about a speedy cure from the disease which had been gradually robbing me of strength and energy. Should I ever feel in need of a kidney remedy again, I would lose no time in getting Doan's Kidney Pills."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

THE MAY QUEEN.

[A Nonsense Ballad of the Gentle Spring, by C. F. Lester, in the St. Nicholas.]

Oh, blithely on the banjo-bush the poojum piped his lay!
(You know a springtime ballad music begin in some such way.)
But Lady Ann was twice as blithe and several times as gay.
"Te-he!" sang she, "they've chosen me to be the Queen of May!"

Well might the Lady Ann rejoice to hear of the intent
To confer this honor on her, for 'twas quite a compliment;
But 'twas not that that made the maid to singularly sing—
"Twas because Sir Bing the Brigand was going to be the king.

Sir Bing had worked at briganding for several years or more.
He stood high in his profession (he was nearly six foot four);
He was a great collector of curios and things,
But he gave his chief attention to coins and diamond rings.

Sir Bing loved Lady Ann; a tender tune he tried to toot
'Neath her window once, upon a moonlight evening and his flute;
But the window (how discouraging!) was not the Lady Ann's,
And—oh, well, let's drop the subject and describe these May-day plans.

The May-pole (brought from Poland) was in a lovely dell
With waving grass and lofty trees and babbling brooks as well,
And a pump that ran a fountain (though I regret to say
That when the pump refused to work, the fountain couldn't play).

Sir Twiddle, the court poet, had composed a May-day song.
Although each line had seven feet 'twas only one foot long.
It had nine "oha" and fourteen "hails," and lots of "thees" and "thys;"
And Sir Twiddle was so proud of it he gave himself a prize!

Some noble youths and maidens were to dance the Dancerelle;
Just how they went about the thing I can't exactly tell;
I think 'twas like a cake-walk (or else a minuet;)
Some steps I can't remember, and the others—I forget.

So everything was ready, quite, to greet the festal day
With melody and mirth, and so it just remains to say
(Though perhaps ere now this little point I ought to have explained)
They didn't have their party, because, you see, it rained!

FANCIES.

She—George, didn't I see you making love to that horrid Smith girl?

He—No, indeed! I don't make love to horrid girls.

PROSECUTION OR PERSECUTION?

As one reads more and more of the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy, he is led to doubt whether sincerity or malice has been the controlling force behind the attacks on the Secretary of the Interior. Recently there has been circulated in Washington, privately and anonymously, a finelyprinted brochure, enclosed in an envelope marked "Confidential," which bears the title: "A Summary of Testimony by the Prosecution in the Ballinger-Pinchot Controversy up to March 15, 1910." There is one element of truth in the title. It does not profess to be summary of all the testimony in the investigation, but what it really is, only the testimony for the prosecution. Covering the entire field of the testimony, on that side, it includes the Ronald letter for the introduction of which the press of the country almost without exception condemned Mr. Pinchot. It contains extracts from the testimony given by Mr. Pinchot and other witnesses for the prosecution which tends to support the Pinchot contentions, with all those portions of the evidence which disproved these assertions, and demonstrated them in a majority of instances to be false or wholly misleading, carefully eliminated. Those familiar with the case say that it would take as much space as the text of the book to contradict the false statements it contains, to say nothing of disproving them. There is not a word of Mr. Ballinger's defense. The summary also handles all allegations, those admitted on cross examination to be false as well as others, as if they were established facts, and the interjected arguments afford evidence of an attempt to deceive the readers.

The publication of the summary at this time is explained only on the ground that the opponents of Mr. Ballinger keenly realize how unsuccessful the mass of inference, insinuation and falsehood has been. In the face of the facts, and that they hope by means of this one-sided summary of the testimony to becloud the issue. The controversy has been an unfortunate one, but there has been and is a feeling that the prosecution is rather a persecution, made out of whole cloth for the protection of some officials, and that a few perhaps of these may have been drawn into it by unscrupulous men who in the change of administration have lost their opportunity for gain.

SCHOOL GARDENS.

Perhaps no greater delight enters into a child's life than that of having a little plot of land which he can call his own, where he can have a garden to plant, and raise the things which his fancy dictates, where he can dig and delve to his heart's content and have the joy of putting seeds into the ground watching the green sprouts come up, and of watering, cultivating and tending the tiny growing things in this little patch of ground which is all his very own.

There was a time when children were somewhat grudgingly given land for this purpose, as it was thought that it was a waste of time, seed and ground and that the child did not derive any benefit from this pastime. Now it is different, for nearly every school of any pretension has its garden, where the children are given small plots of land and taught by competent instructors how to raise the flowers or vegetables which they choose to have. They not only learn the names of plants and flowers, shrubs and trees, and the different kinds of vegetables, and how to cultivate them properly, but are taught something of the different soils and how to work and enrich them to the best advantage, and also the nature of the different insects and worms which are destructive to them. They are also taught in many schools, in connection with the gardening to study birds and their habits, so that they may learn the amount of good the birds do in feeding on the destructive insects which otherwise would ruin and kill the different varieties of flowers and vegetables.

The children take keen delight in this branch of their education, and to many in the city it comes as a sort of revelation to see how the ground is prepared, the way the seed is planted, and finally how the little green shoots peep above the ground, seeming at first almost too frail to touch. All these things, besides the actual teaching, give pleasure to the children, who from the first are interested and eagerly await the time to work in the garden. Those who have never seen the school gardens should at the first opportunity take a peep at one of the vacant lots which in many places have been taken over for the children's benefit. It is really for their benefit, too, because most of the vegetables and flowers raised in these little gardens go to the homes of the children who have tended and cared for them from seed time until harvest, and their pride in the result, be it ever so small, is good to see.

This study of fruit, vegetables, flowers, insects and birds and the many things which one must learn in order to be a successful gardener and grower of things is to be commended and deserves to grow more in favor in every school in the country. It not only broadens the child's life and makes for the love of the beautiful in nature, but brings health and strength to many children in a way which is not only a benefit to them but a pleasure as well. These gardens are a factor for good in the life of the school children of America which it is not easy to over-estimate.

"DOLLAR DIPLOMACY."

The President is quite right in treating the term "dollar diplomacy," which has been hurled at his Secretary of State, as a compliment, though intended as a sneer. We are credited with introducing "shirt sleeves diplomacy," which means diplomacy without much circumlocution or ceremony about it; diplomacy of a rather simple and direct sort. Possibly we did introduce it, and thereby gave something of a shock to the diplomatists of the old school in Europe, but assuredly we did not introduce "dollar diplomacy."

Are not the foreign envoys at Pekin and Constantinople chiefly employed in securing contracts, concessions and franchises for their "nationals"? Has not European diplomacy concerned itself largely for many years with the establishment of banks and the introduction of railroads and concessions in trade? Did not Kaiser Wilhelm himself visit Constantinople and give a battery of artillery to the Sultan—Abdul Hamid of execrable memory—following which some valuable railroad concession or a contract for bridging the Golden Horn was given to Germans. Every European nation has been pushing its envoys in Asia and South America to the last degree to obtain contracts and concessions for their subjects.

If they, we much more. We have scarcely any interest in the political affairs of the rest of the world. About the only fundamental political interest we have in international politics is expressed by the Monroe Doctrine, and that is really only a measure of self-defense. It is a declaration that we will not allow fires to be started on our neighbors' promises, because they might reach ours; at least, that is what the doctrine meant until recently expanded. Dollar diplomacy is exactly the thing we need. We desire railroad contracts in China and Turkey and battleship contracts from South America, and business of every sort. That is just the sort of foreign affairs which concerns us and we have plenty of European precedents for diplomacy of that variety.

President Taft's travels are costing the government a large sum of money for the protection which the secret service affords him. Chief Wilkie told the House committee on appropriations that the bureau's expenses in this particular for six months are almost equal to the cost during the full preceding year, and that the estimates for protection would be at least $30,000 in excess of last year's appropriation. The President must be protected, and apparently he must travel.

Dr. Edward M. Gallaudet, world-famous for his efforts in behalf of deaf-mutes, who has resigned as president of the Columbia Institute for the Deaf and Dumb in Washington, after a devoted service of 53 years, is forced to take this action because of advancing years and a desire to retire before the oncoming restrictions of the weight of years unfit him for the duties of his position. He has well earned his retirement.

A long step toward general direct nominations was taken by the Massachusetts senate when a bill was passed to a third reading which provides for such nominations for members of the legislature, provided the law is accepted by the voters at the next election. The measure has yet to receive the approval of the house of representatives.

It was hardly necessary for President Taft to defend his action in appointing Governor Hughes to the Supreme Court bench. It needs no explanation before the country, even if a few demagogues and illusionists have criticised the appointment.

Another city destroyed by an earthquake. One can scarcely realize how devastating these earth shakings are unless he is at the scene. There is something terrible about the suddenness of an earth shock.

The Chinese prince, Tsai Tao, might well praise America. He has certainly been agreeably entertained during his stay here, and was given every opportunity to see the country and people at their best.

If the city can save $750 in the printing of the City Documents, there is but one thing to do—advertise for new bids which will enable the printers to do the work to the better advantage of the city.

The illness of King Edward of England is apparently of a serious nature. God save the king.

THE MAY MAGAZINES.

The North American Review for May presents a table of contents of interest. It makes a departure and opens with a poem, "Michelangelo," by Rhys Carpenter, a Rhodes scholar at Oxford, England. President Woodrow Wilson contributes a closely analyzed article on "Hide-and-Seek Politics." Following this is a statement by Philip Loring Allen on the cumbrous form of the Australian ballot, in an article entitled "The Multifarious Australian Ballot." The eloquent style of Swinburne's prose will be found in an essay of his entitled, "The Early Plays of Beaumont and Fletcher." Herbert Croly has a timely article on "Democratic Factions and Insurgent Republicans." Major General W. H. Carter, U. S. A., makes a strong plea for proper military equipment in an article on "Military Preparedness."

"The Right to Strike: Its Limitations" is a presentation of the legal aspect of this question by Joseph J. Feely. Mr. Howell's accustomed literary form will be found in an appreciation on recent works of modern poets, entitled "Some Volumes of Verse." The president of Stevens Institute, Alexander C. Humphreys, has a short article entitled "A Plea for Justice," in which he makes a case for the Institute against the local authorities and the national government. "Shall Vivisection be Restricted" is a continuation by Genevieve Grandcourt, who replies to an article by E. D. Berdoe which appeared in the March number of the Review. A discriminating estimate of "Thomas Platt" is given in an article by Lemuel E. Quigg. "The Crisis in Great Britain is indicated by Sydney Brooks in a careful study of the situation in England at the present time. The editor states his views on the question of woman franchise in an article on "The Inherent Right." In the literary department many of the recent new books are reviewed.

On his return from Panama Editor Joe Chapple of the National Magazine proceeds to prepare an exhaustive isthmus, under the title, "The Panama Canal As It Is." The article is preceded by an "An Industrial Epic," a prose poem, contributed by Professor L. H. Bailey of Cornell University, who was on the isthmus with the editorial party. The readers are furnished with a specially prepared two-page map in colors, which has been pronounced superior to anything yet published.

The number includes stirring fiction, including the story of "The Hand of Providence," by Charles H. Olin, and "Sergeant Black's Memorial Day," a touching tale suited to May 30, told by Maitland LeRoy Osborne and chapters of the serial, "Hum." The poem, "The Easter Lilies," by Edward Wilbur Mason, is a fine lyric. The boys on the farm will be interested in an authoritative account of how the Agricultural Department of Washington is "Helping the Farmer Boys." It describes the work of Dr. Knapp in stimulating corn culture, by co-operating with the boys, and affords a hopeful side-light on economic questions.

"At the Auto Show," "Roosevelt in Moving Pictures," "The Political Health of the Nation," an article by Senator Owen of Oklahoma, will be read with profit. "The New Arkansaw Traveler" tells his story well. "Affairs at Washington" are discussed in the usual way by the editor. The Cosy Corner, The Home and other features are as attractive as usual.

MINNEAPOLIS AND ST. PAUL.

Richard Burton, poet and educator, rejoiced at a luncheon in Minneapolis over the disappearance of the old enmity between Minneapolis and St. Paul. "It was a bitter and irrational enmity," said Professor Burton, "for Minneapolis and St. Paul are both really very pleasant places.

"It is recorded that a Minneapolis capitalist could not, till late in life, be induced to set foot inside St. Paul. He did, one day, make the journey, and after some hours in our neighbor city he returned home, a bitter sa to his mouth.

"'Well, what did you think of our town, sir?' a St. Paul reporter asked him that night.

"'The ugliest vilest town I've ever seen,' the capitalist replied.

"'The reporter was hurt. He knew he could not print anything of that sort. He bit his lip and said:

"'Yet God made St. Paul, sir.'

"'Certainly He did,' the capitalist answered, 'but we must always remember that he made it for the St. Paulites; and by the same token, though comparisons are odious, He made hell.'"

GOLD WATCH USED AS A BOOK-MARK.

[New York Post.]

Singular articles are frequently found in the books on the shelves of the public libraries. Gold-bowed spectacles, bank-bills, and many more curious things have been used for book-marks and left behind by their owners through sheer forgetfulness. Sometimes the owners are found, or come back to seek their property. Very often, though, the reverse happens. One of the most remarkable book-marks noted by librarians in this city, a gold watch and chain was restored to its owner through a curious chain of circumstances.

The owner was a woman who had occasion to look up data on the reference shelves of the library. In the course of her researches, she took down many books and had to mark many passages in them. Finally, the bits of paper she had with her were exhausted and she looked about her for a substitute. There was none visible, and in desperation she snatched her watch and chain from the table and slipped them between the leaves. It would only be for a minute, she told herself, as she turned to look back over some of the other marked paragraphs. But just at that moment, as it chanced, the bell rang for the readers to vacate the library and the woman closed the book absent-mindedly, allowing the massive volume to fall with all its weight on the slim gold chain. The chain snapped off short, and the woman rose to replace the book on the shelf, without noticing that her watch and most of the chain were between the leaves.

For two days the watch lay in the book on the open reference-shelf, free to the touch of all who came into the room. But as it happened nobody took down that particular volume. The man who was the first to handle it was honest, and immediately turned over the odd book-mark to the librarian. A search was instituted by the library officials, and the woman was found with little difficulty. She had given up her watch as hopelessly lost. It is said that this is the only case of its kind in the half-century that the library has existed.

Industrial Exhibition in Providence Next Fall Abandoned.

"Purified" Wood Alcohol Found in Westerly Whiskey—Honors to Rev. S. H. Webb.

Plans for a big industrial exposition in Providence next September, during the sessions of the convention of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association, have been abandoned. The general committee in charge has dropped the project as it related to the coming fall, and instead began the preparation of plans for such an exposition to be held some time in 1911 or thereafter. In connection with the waterways convention itself, Governor Pothier announced that a meeting of the General Assembly, Providence Board of Trade and Providence City Council committees, which are planning for local participation in the sessions will be held May 13. At the forthcoming meeting the three bodies will organize for more effective work and will select executive committeemen, officers, etc. It is expected by that time that President Taft will have stated what day he will be able to come to Providence to attend the convention. When the Board of Trade's exposition committee met it was practically the unanimous opinion that the time remaining before the convention would not be sufficient to allow for the exposition. Several of the members desired to have an exposition, but it was agreed by all that no suitable building could be erected in the time left and that the exposition, if carried through would be incomplete and unsatisfactory. As a substitute for the abandoned plans the committee authorized President Gross of the Board of Trade to appoint a committee of five to report to the general committee upon men advisability of holding an exposition at some time in the future when proper arrangements could be made.

Fifty-eight per cent of "purified" wood alcohol was found by chemical analysis in one of the three samples of Westerly whiskey confiscated by the authorities of that town and turned over to the secretary of the State Pure Food and Drug Commission. The whiskey was taken in the recent epidemic of deaths from supposed whiskey poisoning in the border towns of Westerly, Stonington and Hopkinton. The other two samples contained no wood alcohol. The "purified" wood alcohol is deadly poison he declares. Report of the finding has been made to Attorney General Greenough, together with the name of the man from whom the poisonous whiskey is claimed to have been bought. Neither Attorney General nor Secretary Groff will disclose the name of the man, nor will either say whether or not he is a druggist. The attorney general said he had turned the report over to Assistant Attorney General Harry Parsons Cross, who had charge of the case of Thomas J. Bannon, the Westerly druggist who was indicted for maintaining a nuisance by the Washington county grand jury shortly after the cessation of the epidemic of sudden deaths.

There was a special Ascension Day service at Christ Church, Providence, Thursday evening in honor of Rev. Samuel H. Webb, who has just completed 43 years of service with the parish, 35 of which he spent as rector. Rev. George L. Locke, rector of St. Michael's Church, Bristol, who has been intimately connected with Mr. Webb during his long service in the diocese, was the speaker of the evening. He briefly traced Mr. Webb's work in the parish and told of his official work in the Diocesan Convention in Rhode Island, as its secretary. He remarked that Mr. Webb had not only been a pastor with his parishioners, but had also been a man among men, and had won for himself a position of esteem and respect in the community. At the special service a selected musical program was rendered by the choir. At the conclusion Rev. Alfred H. Wheeler presented several floral tributes to Mr. Webb from societies and individuals in the church. After the regular service the Ladies' Aid Society tendered a reception to the pastor emeritus in the vestry. Refreshments were served and Mr. Webb spent a busy hour in talking with his friends and receiving their congratulations on his completion of his forty-third year of work with the parish. He has been connected with the diocese of Rhode Island for 46 years and is its senior priest.

Standing near while her son, Henry Demers, aged 16, who had been fatally injured by a blast at the ledge of the Central Falls Stone Company Wednesday afternoon, was being taken to the hospital, Mrs John Demers did not become aware of the fact that it was her own boy until Thursday morning, when she called at the plant to see if by any chance it was he. Mrs. Demers was attracted to the scene of the accident, hearing that a boy and man had been badly injured, but her attention centred on the man, Thomas Robert, who was struck by a rock and his leg fractured, and she did not notice that her son was the boy who was dying from injuries sustained when a big piece of rock came hurtling toward him, striking him on the forehead. Wednesday night, when the boy failed to return home, his father instituted a search, spending the entire night in looking for him. Thursday the mother went to the office of the Central Falls Stone Company, of which Mayor Pigeon is president, and asked about the young man who had been killed. She was shown the cap which he wore, and on seeing it fainted away, recognizing it as the one her son had worn. The father of the boy then went to the undertaking rooms in Pawtucket, and identified the body as that of his son. Demers had been employed at the E. Jenckes Mill in Pawtucket, but Wednesday was not working. He had been around the blacksmith shop and was in the place when the large piece of rock came through which struck him on the forehead, fracturing the frontal bone and causing his death.

The experiment made last fall under the auspices of the Methodist people of Pawtucket in establishing a Sunday School in the Darlington section of that city has, so far as the school itself is concerned, proved a success, but those who have had charge of the work are face to face with a new situation. The building which has heretofore been occupied was originally built for residential purposes, but the owner was ready to give it into the care of the school until such time as it might be needed. That time has now come and the school is obliged to find other quarters. There has been talk for some time about the advisability of purchasing land and erecting a suitable chapel, and it has finally been agreed to do this. In fact, the land has already been bought, and within the next few weeks a building will be erected on it suitable for the needs of the Sunday School. It is also probable that within this chapel in a short time regular preaching services will be held, and thus will be begun the move for the establishing some time in the future of a new church for Darlington.

Patents have been granted Rhode Islanders as follows: Harry B. Borneide, Providence, leather compressing mechanism for shoe finishing machines; William B. Caswell, assignor of one-half to A. E. Caswell, Newport, vertically adjustable shade hanger; Henry E. Parmenter, Newport, metal bending machine; Ira F. Peck, Providence, assignor to B. A. Ball and H. A. Sevigne, Boston, bread wrapping machine, George T. Nicholls, Providence, knitting machine; Abel Vermelsch, Lawrence, Mass., and N. Verhulst, Pawtucket, compound for use in preparing sizing compositions.

At the last meeting of the Congregationalist ministers of Providence it was voted to unite that conference and other bodies in inviting the Religious Education Association to hold its annual meeting next February in Providence. The Baptist Ministers' Conference has already issued a similar invitation. It is expected that the Methodists will soon join, and the matter will be presented to the diocesan convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church this month. The Religious Education Association now consists of about 2,000 members, resident in nearly all the states of the Union. It is inter-denominational in character and on its program have appeared not only Protestants but Roman Catholics. The last convention was held in March in Nashville, where the program included 110 speakers, and each evening an audience of 4,000 people was present.

THE WEATHER.

BOSTON, May 6, 8 A. M.—Forecast for Boston and vicinity—Fair tonight and Saturday; light westerly winds.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

Showers are general this morning in the Missouri valley but otherwise clear weather prevails over the country. The area of low pressure which covered the Rocky mountain districts Thursday has moved southeast and filled up in the northern portion. This morning it covers only the lower Missouri valley and the Southwest. There is a slight depression over Nova Scotia, and the pressure has fallen to slightly below 30 inches over the Canadian Rockies; elsewhere it is above normal. Frost was general this morning over the Lake region and Northeast, but generally light, except in the northern portion of New England, where some sections reported a minimum temperature of 24. At 8 a. m. the temperature in New England was generally near 44, except in northern Maine, where it was about 36. At New York it was 43, Washington 48, Atlanta 56, Jacksonville 70, St. Louis 50, Chicago 46, St. Paul 52 Omaha 46, Kansas City 46, Denver 48, Los Angeles 50, San Francisco 52 and Portland, Oregon 50.

TOWN OF MIDDLETOWN.

Town Tax and Poll Tax for 1910.

Assessors' Notice.

Middletown, R. I. May 5, A. D. 1910.

The undersigned, Assessors of Taxes in and for the Town of Middletown, in the State of Rhode Island, &c. ... elected thereto and sworn, hereby give notice that on Tuesday, the thirty-first day of May instant, A. D. 1910, at twelve o'clock noon, they will assess and apportion the Town Tax ordered to be levied and assessed on the inhabitants of said Town and the ratable property therein at the annual Town Meeting of the qualified electors thereof, duly notified and legally held therein on the ninth day of April 1910, on the several persons, corporations, estates and property liable therefor, and taxable under the laws of said State, and at the same time will assess the Poll Tax for the current year A. D. 1910 as provided in Chapter ... of the General Laws of this State.

The undersigned further hereby give notice that they will meet and be in session at the Town Hall in said Middletown on Wednesday, the first day of June next, A. D. 1910, on Thursday, the second, and on Friday, the third days of said month of June, from ... o'clock A. M., until four o'clock P. M. for the purpose of receiving a true and exact account of all the ratable property of every person, corporation and estate, liable to taxation in said Town under the laws of said State; and every such person, corporation and estate liable to taxation in said Middletown, as aforesaid, is hereby notified and required to bring into said Assessors within the time or times and at the place of meeting and session of said Assessors as hereinbefore mentioned and designated, a true and exact account of all his or her ratable estate describing and specifying the value of every parcel of his or her real and personal estate and make oath to the truth of said account before one of the undersigned Assessors as aforesaid. Whoever neglects or refuses to bring in such account if overtaxed shall have no remedy therefor, as provided by law.

Every male person above the age of twenty years who pays no ... tax or property tax less than ... a year, and who if registered would be qualified to vote, is liable to the assessment of a poll tax of one dollar, ... so much thereof as with ... taxes assessed against ... amount to one dollar.

..O RIOTING AND NO ARRESTS MADE.

Action Doubtless Deterred by Heavy Penalties.

Providence Conferences Will Precipitate Crisis.

PROVIDENCE, May 6.—The fifth ... of the strike was marked by a ... ick of rioters demonstrations on the ... rt of the strikers, not an arrest being ... ade. In all probability this decrease ... action was caused by the heavy ... penalties imposed on the 36 strikers ... nd sympathizers arrested during the ... ast two days. The ten strikers who ... were arrested yesterday for revelling ... appeared in court today. Three of the ... number pleaded guilty and were fined ... $25 and costs. The other seven pleaded ... guilty and were held in $200 ... each for a further hearing. Unable ... to secure bail, the men were placed ... in the detention room.

Notwithstanding the fact that 36 of their number had been arrested during the last 48 hours, and had been ... nearly jailed, the Italian strikers assembled as usual today and started ... to the grounds of the buildings where laborers are supposed to be at work. As had been the case the last two days ... no violence was reported during the ... forty hours, but the authorities fear ... ing that further attacks could be ... made on the laborers by the strikers ... later in the day, had assembled at the various police stations every available special officer, while the regular ... policemen were in many cases guarding the laborers working on buildings ... in ditches.

The crisis in the situation was expected today, for the committee of ... representatives of all the crafts affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, in which was vested the power last night to either call out ... the $4,000 union employes in a general ... sympathetic strike or to settle the ... strike of the building laborers, started out to confer with all the contractors with whom the striking foreigners ... were at odds. Included in the committee was Peter d'Alessandro, organizer ... of the Building Laborers' Union.

A rule which has been in existence ... some years, making it impossible to ... give financial assistance to any union which had not been affiliated with the building trades department at least six months was rescinded at last evening's meeting, and one passed which will admit of immediate assistance in cases where it is desired. This action, it is thought, was taken in order that the building laborers, whose union has been in existence only four months, may be given assistance in case the present strike should prove protracted.

NEW MANAGER OF THE BELLEVUE PALACE.

The Bellevue Palace announces its opening under new management for this season, Mr. A. D. Frank of Providence being in charge. Mr. George M. Stone, who conducted the establishment last year, was unable to return to Newport this summer, on account of business engagements in Boston. Mr. Frank is an experienced manager in the ice cream and confectionery business, having had a store in Providence for many years.

A TAYLOR MEMORIAL.

Natural History Society Pays Tribute to Its Late President.

Collection of Birds to Constitute Ornithological Cabinet Bearing His Name.

The Natural History Society held its annual meeting at the museum Thursday afternoon, with Dr. H. R. Storer, the honorary life president, in the chair. Aside from some routine business, the meeting resolved itself into a memorial of the late A. O'D. Taylor, president of the society for a number of years.

In opening Dr. Storer spoke eloquently and with deep feeling of Mr. Taylor, who was his close personal friend and associate. He said the society has lost more than it at present can appreciate. Mr. Taylor came here with the little corps of scientists in charge of the work of the United States Geological Survey, and making his home here became identified with all that was best in Newport's life. His labors in behalf of the society were unremitting. His taste in all things was of the best. He was a poet of exceptional talent. In connection with other institutions, notably the Unity Club, he did much to stimulate culture as well as brotherly feeling throughout the town and his removal was a distinct calamity to Newport.

Mr. Richard Bliss agreed with Dr. Storer. He spoke particularly of Mr. Taylor's energy and success in procuring lecturers for the society. Mr. Taylor's tact and persuasive ways were irresistible and the society had had the full benefit of them.

Mr. J. M. K. Southwick said that he thoroughly endorsed the remarks of those who had spoken. Without Mr. Taylor's aid and general efficiency in every way, the society could hardly have existed. The speaker's relations with him were always of the most cordial character.

Dr. Anderson spoke of Mr. Taylor as an acquaintance of only a few years. He had found him a thorough gentleman and a true Christian. A greater interest in the work of this society, which was so dear to him, would be the most fitting tribute to his memory.

The secretary presented a "minute," to be entered on the society's records and this was adopted unanimously.

Just after Mr. Taylor's death, Dr. Storer wrote the following letter to the council of the society, which was read to the meeting:

Gentlemen of the Council of the Newport Natural History Society:

Confined to my bed for the last three weeks, I regret exceedingly that I cannot be with you this afternoon to personally join in the expression of sorrow and of gratitude that the Natural History Society owes to its late president, Mr. A. O'D. Taylor.

Intimately associated with him as I have been in the society's work for many years, and especially during its early life, I can perhaps the better testify to his constant devotedness and to his sterling worth. He was unremitting in his efforts for our success. Having had previous experience as an officer of the Belfast Society, he was able to make many suggestions and they were always valuable and wise. An all-round naturalist himself, he could appreciate special tastes and adaptations in others and do much towards their development. Had I at present the physical strength, I would speak to you at greater length of his abilities, his unfailing interest, his unflagging faithfulness.

I feel able, however, to dwell but upon a single point, his extreme modesty, his self-effacement, and his most generous relation towards myself. You will remember that through your great courtesy, I was permitted to retain the presidency of the society for a number of years. I became very conscious that the frailties of long continued ill health were gradually unfitting me for the leadership in which I had taken so much enjoyment and so much pride. Year after year I communicated to Mr. Taylor my resignation, and my desire that he, as my most probable successor should receive the promotion for which he was so especially well fitted and which, I know, he would so highly prize. His very great kindness of heart delayed my completing what I was sure was my duty. Had I longer listened to his self-sacrificing pleading, I should indeed have been ashamed.

What higher tribute than this could be paid to the memory of any man? To Mr. Taylor the society, next of course to his ideally united and happy home, was his chief delight. Its council and the members generally his dearest friends. Bird-lover that he was, he has gone where his kindness to even the sparrows that had fallen will bring to him his deserved reward.

Horatio R. Storer.
58 Washington St., April 12, 1910.

It was proposed by Dr. Storer that the collection of birds now in possession of the society be hereafter known as the "A. O'D. Taylor Ornithological Cabinet." This proposal met with the hearty approval of the meeting.

At present no action will be taken toward filling Mr. Taylor's place, this matter being left for future consideration.

At an early date it is expected that Mr. J. M. K. Southwick will give a paper on the fishing industries of Newport.

JAMESTOWN.

[Regular correspondence of The News.]

Mr. C. F. Wittelsey of Springfield is at his cottage at Conanicut Park.

Mrs. G. A. Brown has returned from a visit to New Bedford.

Tug Cohennet of Fall River is tied up to Ferry wharf, awaiting a tow from outside.

Miss Stevens of Newport was on the Island today, attending to the opening of her mother's cottage, on the south shore.

The work of laying the tar macadam on Narragansett avenue, will probably begin Monday. The surveyors to mark out the work are expected tomorrow.

Miss Letha Brown, who has been ill in New Bedford, has recovered and returned to her home here.

Mr. Thomas Matterson, who is employed in Brooklyn, is spending a month's vacation with his parents, on Union street.

The work of paving on Clinton avenue is progressing. About one half will be completed tonight.

CAPTAIN KENYON SEES THE COMET.

Captain Kenyon of the Brenton's Point life saving crew made an observation of the comet this morning, and being something of a photographer was almost tempted to try to take a negative of the attraction in the east, because it was so bright. He has been trying for a long time to secure a sight of the comet, but this was the first morning which has been sufficiently clear. It came near not being so then, for the sky was cloudy until nearly 3 o'clock.

NOT A HABITABLE HOUSE REMAINS.

Three Hundred and Fifty Bodies Already Found.

Cartago, Costa Rica, Laid Waste by Earth Shocks.

SAN JUAN DEL SUR, Nicaragua, May 6.—Reports received from San Jose, Costa Rica, today state that no habitable houses remain in Cartago, which was visited by a series of earth shocks Wednesday night. Three hundred and fifty bodies have been recovered from the ruins. Martial law has been declared in the stricken town to prevent disorders and looting. The authorities are making every effort toward the relief of the wounded and destitute. The victims who survived their injuries are being removed to San Jose, 14 miles distant.

At least 500 persons were killed, many hundreds more injured, some fatally, and scores of buildings, including the Palace of Justice, erected by Andrew Carnegie, were levelled.

Details are very meagre, for the telegraph wires have been levelled between San Jose and Cartago, and the operators at the latter place were killed.

The wife and child of Dr. Bocanegra, Guatemalan magistrate to the Central American arbitration court were killed.

San Jose was also shaken, some of the buildings being damaged, but no deaths are reported in that city. A number of persons were slightly injured.

Earth shocks also were felt at several points in Nicaragua, near the Costa Rica frontier. Reports reaching here state that there is much suffering and destitution at Cartago, consequent on the disaster.

Cartago, capital of Cartago province, is about 12 miles southwest of San Jose, lying at the foot of Irazu, or Cartago, volcano, a mountain 11,200 feet high. It has an estimated population of 10,000, and is the seat of the Central American Peace Court, for the home of which Andrew Carnegie donated a large sum. It is located in the centre of an extensive fertile tract, on which coffee, tropical fruits, etc., are raised in abundance and exported. It is also the seat of a college.

Cartago was the capital of the country until 1823. It has suffered frequently from earthquakes, and was partially or in greater part destroyed in 1723, 1803, 1825, 1841, 1851 and 1851.

April 13 last a series of earthquakes, varying in intensity, swept over Costa Rica, doing considerable material damage, but practically without loss of life. San Jose suffered most severely, while both Cartago and Port Limon felt the force of the disturbances.

RED CROSS CONTRIBUTES.

Asks Americans to Aid in Relief Work in Costa Rica.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—The United States consul at San Jose, Costa Rica, states in a telegram to the State Department, received over night, that it was reported there that 500 people were killed and a very large number injured in Cartago as the result of the earthquake. So far as the consul was able to learn there were no casualties among the Americans.

As soon as the news of the disaster reached them the officials of the Red Cross withdrew $5,000 from the emergency fund and, through the State Department, cabled the money to William L. Merry, United States minister at San Jose. The Red Cross announced that it would receive contributions from any Americans who desire to aid in the relief work in Costa Rica.

OTHER TOWNS DAMAGED.

Much Suffering in Places on Railway from Cartago to Port Lima.

PANAMA, May 6.—Advices received here from the province of Cartago in Costa Rica state that the earthquake shocks of Wednesday night caused much suffering, not only in Cartago, the capital, but in the towns along the railroad line from Cartago to Port Limon, San Jose, so far as is known here, did not suffer greatly. The reports agree that many persons were killed or injured at Cartago, and a portion of the place was wiped out.

LARCENY CHARGES FAIL.

Soldiers Accused of Theft at "Wild Acre" Again Discharged by the Court.

In the district court this morning the two soldiers, Dillon and McDonald, were tried on charges of larceny from "Wild Acre", the residence of Mr. A. H. Olmsted. The two had aleady been tried on charges of breaking and entering "Wild Acre" and "Shamrock Cliff" and acquitted. Following the suggestion of the court that it might be a case of larceny charges of larceny were brought, the men being charged with the larceny of three swords, some cigars and a pair of gloves, which were recovered.

Dillon was first discharged, and then McDonald was discharged. The court suggested that perhaps receiving stolen property covered the case. McDonald, at the trial today, named the soldier who gave him the swords, and whom he did not know at the last trial. It was the same Thomas who has left the fort and cannot defend himself. Mr. Olmsted was present and was naturally much disappointed at the failure to convict even of larceny, after his place had been broken open and goods taken therefrom.

TO BRING KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS STATE PARADE HERE.

At the weekly meeting of Newport Council, Knights of Columbus, Thursday evening, the delegates to the state convention, Past Grand Knight Thomas J. Williams and Grand Knight John E. Murray, were instructed to vote and use their influence in favor of having the state parade, October 12 next, held in Newport. State Warden James J. Callahan, who is a member of the state council, will also work in favor of Newport. The convention will be held in Providence next Tuesday. At the meeting Thursday evening a class of new members were elected and several applications for membership received.

TO SAVE THE ELEPHANTS.

Friends of the Animals in England and France Urge Creation of Reserves in the Colonies.

[New York Herald.]

Whether it be the outcome of Mr. Roosevelt's recent hunting trip in Africa or not, a meeting held by the French society known as "The Friends of the Elephant," at which it was decided to approach the French government with the object of obtaining better reserves for elephants in Africa, has had the effect of reviving some interest in the same matter among members of the sister society in London.

Lieutenant Colonel John Henry Patterson, one of the most active members of the society, said in an interview:—"In the United Kingdom this question has been ably and zealously dealth with by the Society for the Preservation of the Wild Fauna of the Empire, which was formed some five years ago by Mr. E. N. Buxton, and which includes among its members a considerable number of foreign sportsmen. The objects of the association are to create sound public opinion on the subject of the preservation of wild life, both at home and in the colonies and British dependencies; to further the formation of game reserves and sanctuaries, the selection of the most suitable places for these sanctuaries, and the enforcing of suitable game laws and regulations.

"The society devotes considerable attention to the preservation of elephants, and has sent many deputations on the subject to successive foreign and colonial secretaries. Elephant reserves at present exist in all our African colonies where these animals are found. In British Gambria no elephants are allowed to be killed, and it is hoped that similar sanctuary will, owing to the efforts of the French society, be extended to the elephants in the French West African possessions.

"For the year ended March, 1908, 539 tons of ivory, worth $2,802,760, were imported into the United Kingdom alone. Taking the average tusk to weigh 40 pounds (a very liberal estimate), this means the death of more than 15,000 elephants."

MIDDLETOWN.

[Regular correspondence of the News.]

There was a large attendance at the meeting of St. Columba's Guild Thursday at the Berkeley parish house, Mrs. Pitt Littlefield entertaining as hostess. Mrs. Augustus Wilbur, the vice president, is in charge of the guild in the absence of the president, Mrs. Lyman C. Josephs, who expects to return from Baltimore next week. The members are arranging for a supper to be given about the middle of the month.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Spink, who have been living in the Stephen Congdon house on the corner of Green End road and Third Beach avenue, are preparing to move at an early date into the C. Henry Congdon house, East Main road. Mr. Spink is to be employed by Mr. James H. Barker.

A morning service, with a celebration of the Holy Communion, was held Thursday, Ascension day, at the Berkeley Memorial Chapel, conducted by Rev. Latta Griswold.

The Peabody school was closed Monday and the Witherbee school is closed today, the teachers, Miss Jennie Hart and Miss Kathryn Muirhead, visiting other schools.

PINEAPPLE TRADE RUINED.

Within the next week or 10 days the vessels that will run pineapples from the Bahamas to the Baltimore packing houses will start on their voyages and are expected to arrive back at Baltimore early in June. The locating of packing houses on the Bahama Islands, the large increase in the quantity of the fruit grown in Florida and other southern states and the admission of pineapples from the territory of Hawaii have in the past two or three years practically ruined the pineapple importing business of Baltimore. Where a dozen vessels in former years were chartered by a firm to bring the fruit to Baltimore one or two vessels can now do the business and the speedy little fruit runners have been forced to seek other trade.

So far this season but two schooners are under charter for the pineapple trade. These are the Chemnite Trayers and the J. Edwin Kirwan both of which are well known at Baltimore. Two of the largest importing and packing firms of Baltimore which in past years employed a large fleet of vessels to bring fruit from the Bahamas will this year employ none and will depend upon the fruit growers shipping it to them.

Mr. Sands is a son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Sands, who have occupied "Wee Bush" on Bellevue avenue, and is well known in yachting and tennis circles here. Miss McFadden has been [illegible] of Mr. and Mrs. George McFadden.

CONGRESS FOR TARIFF BOARD.

Members Divided, However, as to Power It Shall Have.

Longworth for Governor—Treaty Rights and Federal Power—Taft's Alaskan Trip.

[Washington correspondence of the News.]

WASHINGTON, May 4.—Whatever else is done by this Congress, it now seems fairly certain that some sort of tariff commission will be established. At present the fight is as to whether this body shall be a mere board which shall report to the President or a commission in fact which shall report to Congress. The insurgents and Democrats want a commission in fact. The regulars favor a board. Their program is to make the $250,000 appropriation asked for by the President and to give the tariff board specific powers to investigate cost of production and other tariff facts at home and abroad. Even though this is not all the advocates of a tariff commission ask for, they feel that it would be a long step in the right direction.

It was recently reported that the widow and children of Leonard Grece, the American executed in Nicaragua, are in dire want. Secretary Knox has therefore asked the United States consul at Managua to relieve their need pending the payment of indemnity by Nicaragua. The language of Mr. Knox's instructions is regarded as a notice served on Nicaragua that the claims will be pressed.

There is a renewal of the boom for Nicholas Longworth for governor of Ohio. When the suggestion of Longworth's candidacy was first made he waved it aside by the statement that he preferred to remain in Congress. The renewal of the talk would indicate that his consent has been gained. The question that is just now agitating the Capital is whether Mr. Longworth's nomination would mean that his distinguished father-in-law would take the stump in his behalf.

The Madden amendment to the railroad bill is regarded as the most radical legislation yet attempted on the question. The amendment, which was adopted in the committee of the whole house by a vote of 120 to 67, calls for physical valuation of the roads. This is the proposition for which Senator La Follette has made his long fight. In the beginning he seemed to have little support. Yet not only the insurgents and Democrats voted for the amendment in the House, but a goodly portion of the regulars as well. The chief opponents of the Madden proposal were Townsend, the author of the House railroad bill, and Mann, the chairman of the committee that has it in charge. Taken together with the provision already adopted, including telegraph and telephone companies, the Madden physical valuation amendment makes the railroad bill an utterly different measure from that prepared by Attorney General Wickersham.

One of the most striking statements made by Secretary Ballinger in his testimony before the investigating committee was that with the same record before him he would clear Hal the Cunningham claims now as he did in the beginning. To make this the more emphatic he reiterated it several times.

The address of President Taft before the Society of International Law reiterated a point brought out by former President Roosevelt at the time of threatened action of the California legislature on the Japanese question. The confession of both Presidents was that in all matters affecting treaties with foreign nations the federal government must be supreme—in other words, the power to promise must carry with it the power to fulfill.

One of the most notable social events of the year was the marriage of Miss Edith Sutherland, daughter of Senator Sutherland of Utah, to Mr. A. Robert Elmore of New York. The President and Vice President and a large army of Senators and their wives were present. After a six weeks' honeymoon tax newly married couple will make their home at Los Angeles, Cal.

The President's latest trip through the central west will keep him out of Washington till the end of the week. On his return he will shortly go to New York to be present at the launching of battleship Florida. Little has been heard of late of the contemplated trip to Alaska next summer, but as no announcement has been made of its abandonment it will probably be made as scheduled. Various and sundry Congressmen are likewise yearning to get away from Washington, but they have no designs on Alaska—no, indeed. The most interesting sports on the map to these gentlemen are their own particular districts. Where there is a job of fence repairing to be done and votes to be corralled against next fall's election. Some of these statesmen feel that their districts may seem as cold as Alaska in November, but they do not want the arctic thing in advance.

HOMES OF WILD CREATURES.

A Peculiar Charm and Interest in the Study of Animals and Their Efforts in Building Nests.

[St. Nicholas.]

There is a peculiar charm and interest in the study of the homes of wild creatures. Their efforts and the results in building these, even in crude, appeal to our sympathies. We have admired, and to some extent, have investigated the nests of the more familiar birds; we have seen the squirrel make its home in some dead tree or hollow limb; we have, perhaps, studied the muskrat and his peculiar dome-shaped house. Few people, however, have had the opportunity of giving the matter extended study.

Among birds the home of the bald eagle is perhaps the most striking possibly because of the majesty of the bird itself. It appeals to the imagination. Built of huge sticks loosely interwoven, and situated on some lofty and inaccessible ledge, with the bones of the eagle's victims scattered round about, it gives a proper setting to the stern and savage character of its builder. Here the eagle reigns supreme, and here year after year he and his mate rear their young. This is the aerie from which he can scan the whole countryside and, like the robber barons of old, levy toll on all who pass his door.

Far in the still, white North, where winter reigns supreme, is the home of the polar bear. When the long Arctic night approaches the bear retires to some sheltered spot, such as the cleft of a rock or the foot of some precipitous bank, in a very short time he is effectually concealed by the heavy snowdrifts. Sometimes the bear waits until a heavy fall of snow, and then digs a white cavern of the requisite form and size. Such is his home for six long months.

Our common little cottontail, or so-called rabbit, does not live in a burrow as does the English rabbit, but makes a slight depression in the ground, in which she lies so flatly pressed to the earth as to be scarcely distinguishable from the soil and the dried herbage in which her abode is situated. The rabbit is strongly attached to its home wherever it may be placed and, even if driven to a great distance from it, contrives to regain its little domicile at the earliest opportunity.

One of the most gruesome among animal homes is the wolf's den. This is simply a hole dug in the side of a bank or a small natural cave, generally situated on the sunny side or a ridge, and almost hidden by bushes and loose boulders. Here the wolf lies snug; in and about his doorway lie the remains of past feasts, which, coupled with his own odor, makes the wolf's den a not very inviting place. Nevertheless there is something so dread and mysterious about this soft-footed marauder that it even lends a fascination to his home.

A "fly-by-night" sort of home is that of our friend the bob-white, yet it seems to serve the purpose very well. Under the broad, low bough of a small pine or cedar tree the flock take their night's repose. Quail, in retiring always sit in a circle with their heads outward, and so they rest presenting a barricade of sharp eyes and sharper ears against possible danger.

The home of the elegant little harvest mouse next claims our attention. It is built upon three or four rank grass stems and is situated a foot or so from the ground. In form it is globular and about four inches in diameter. It is composed of thin dry grass, is of nearly uniform substance, and open and airy in construction. It shows great cleverness in this little animals, which is the smallest of mammals.

The winter home of the American red deer is very interesting. When the snow begins to fly, the leader of the herd guides them to some sheltered spot where provender is plentiful. Here, as the snow falls, they pack it down, tramping out a considerable space, while about them the snow mounts higher and higher until they cannot get out if they would. From the main opening, or "yard," as it is called, tramped-out paths lead to the nearby trees and shrubbery, which supply them with food. In this way they manage to pass the winter in comparative peace and safety.

One could go on enumerating bird and animal homes by the score, and they would all be of interest. The present space, however, will not permit of going further. The writer has, therefore, simply described some of the more curious of the homes, as well as those presenting the wildest contrast.

KEEP YOUR HEAD UNCOVERED.

The Constant Wearing of a Hat Propagates Dandruff Germs.

There are many men who wear their hats practically all the time when awake, and are blessed with a heavy shock of hair; yet if the scalps of these same men once become infested with dandruff germs, the parasites would multiply all the quicker for lack of air. Baldness would ensue as the final result. Newbro's Herpicide kills these germs and stimulates unhealthy hair to abundant growth. Herpicide is a pleasant hair dressing as well as a dandruff cure and contains not an atom of injurious substance. Sold by leading druggists. HOW TO CURE ECZEMA, PIMPLES, AND DANDRUFF.

We desire to say that when we took the agency for ZEMO we were convinced that it was a valuable remedy for eczema, pimples and dandruff. Yet, we must frankly admit that Zemo has far exceeded our expectations as a treatment for skin diseases. We are pleased to state that we shall continue the agency as ZEMO has given splendid results wherever recommended. Our customers like ZEMO too, because it is a clean vegetable liquid for external use.

ZEMO effects its cures by drawing to the surface of the skin and destroying the germ life that causes the disease, leaving the skin clear and healthy. It does not soil the clothing or linen and can be used freely on infants.

With every purchase we give a booklet on skin diseases explaining in simple words how any person can be cured at home of any form of skin or scalp diseases by this clean, scientific remedy.

THE AIRSHIP OF THE FUTURE.

Machine Will be Capable of Traveling 75 Miles an Hour.

Aeronauts May be Able to Take a Trip Around the World in About Eight Days.

[The Century.]

From the standard of present development the airship of 1915 may be conceived as having a hull of rigid construction, 1000 feet long and 80 feet beam, with accommodations for 125 to 150 passengers, and a crew of 42 men.

The new air liner will resemble a submarine, or rather a flying fish. All its parts will be compactly built into the hull. Its under body, 800 feet long, 12 feet wide and nine feet high, will extend between the elbows fore and aft where the hull begins to curve toward its pointed bow and stern. The under-body will hold seven passengers and eight operating sections, after the fashion of a compartment sleeping car. A continuous passageway will extend from end to end.

The prow glazed, with artificial mica, will furnish an aerial observatory. Its interior will be a series of grill galleries, connected by steps. Here will be the "bridge," the air liner's nerve centre, with signal radiation to all parts of the ship. A narrow gallery will reach the extreme nose, where a small exploring gun, swung on a universal joint, can be fired toward most points in space. On its several platforms will be the navigating deck, the helm, the "wireless," the chart room and both meteorological and astronomical "observatories."

Below the "bridge" will be a hatchway to the main passage in the forward underbody of the ship, where there is a companionway which is the ship's portal. Abaft of this will be the captain's cabin. To starboard will begin the main passage and staterooms, with all doors opening on the passage. Next to the captain's quarters, in sequence, will be officers' and engineers' staterooms; officers' wardroom and mess; the barber shop; the first motor compartment; the toilet room; living quarters, a central lounging, reading and dining saloon, the width of the ship.

The saloons, glazed with openings of artificial mica, can be transformed into open deck space, by sliding side ports. At the stern will be the steward's quarters, where all cooking will be by electricity. Meals will be served in each saloon, the pantry service being operated by escalator, passing through the "hold," which will be attached to the airship's entire underbody. Table service will be delivered through a trap in the saloon floor. Telephone and electric annunciators will connect each section with the steward's quarters. As only 25 passengers will be accommodated in each section, but one steward will be required there.

All bed covering will be of the lightest weights, because electron heaters carrying the hot exhaust of the motors will keep the temperature automatically even, while flying at frigid altitudes. When flying low in the tropics the airship may be perfectly cooled by ventilation. Only hand baggage will be permitted for the quick passage, other "baggage" going by steamer or express airship.

The sides of the "hold," or tunnel, five feet high and eight feet wide, will be lined with continuous tanking, containing gasolene fuel, to be forced upward into the engine rooms, as needed. The outside of the "hold" will serve as the airship's rounded keel, and will enable the craft to float on water; elastic buffers for landing will be fixed under each engine section. The eight motor compartments will each be equipped with one 200 horsepower motor, transmitting energy by short steel belts, in flattened tubes, to one propeller on the same side of the hull, and to auxiliary engines operating pumps that will control the gas chambers, withdrawing expanding gas and condensing it into the airship's tubular frame. They will also drive powerful fans for ventilating the air spaces of the hull and the living quarters. The electric power plants, for lighting, cooking and operating the escalator, will be in the engine compartments.

The top of the hull, now the Zeppelin's observatory, will become a long "hurricane deck" of thin, light planking, with side rails. Here will be kept "service" implements; two slender masts, carrying the "wireless" antennae and the yellow "top lights;" observatories for cloud triangulation and taking the altitude of stars; searchlights, kite winch and three airship's "boats," two small, swift aeroplane "scouts"—one fore, the other aft with ample space for launching and alighting. The deck will be reached by small, winding openwork stairs through the hull. The hull will be divided into 20 gas-tight compartments, for sustaining the airship in space. Along the port and starboard sides five sets of curved aeroplane surfaces will help to lift and support the airship or steer it up and down. They will be "stepped," to avoid interference. Between them will be eight propellers, four on each side, at alternating levels along the hull.

It is believed that within five years such an air liner will be capable of traveling 75 miles an hour, ordinarily, and often 120 miles, in the upper levels. Two miles above the equator a planetary current encircles the globe at tremendous speed. The ashes of the eruption of Krakatoa were carried in this belt, around the world, in 14 days.

In 10 years an airship driven 50 miles an hour may perchance make that trip in eight days, flying at a speed of 120 miles an hour, or 3,000 miles a day. Is it all a dream? Ten years ago a prophecy of the present achievements of German air navigators would have been received with incredulity.

OLD SHAKER COLONY IN BANKRUPTCY.

[Detroit Free Press.]

News that the property of the Shaker Colony at Union Village, Ohio, has gone into the hands of a receiver and that the colony itself will probably soon be wiped out by the death of its venerable members, calls attention to the slow passing of the oldest communistic religious body in the United States. In 1887 there were 4,000 Shakers in the country; today there are fewer than 1,000, scattered in 15 colonies.

Because the Shakers have always been a harmless, lovable, inoffensive folk of marked individuality, they have made a deeper impression on the country than many a much larger sect, and they have figured rather extensively in story and novel. They anticipated the prophecy of Annie Besant, she of the occult insight, by more than a century, accepting Anne Lee, alias "Anne the Word," and "Mother Anne," as a reincarnation of Christ. But they worship not Anne Lee, but simply "The Highest Good," and while they esteem the Bible, they consider much of it secular writing, and believe in continuous revelation. This has led them to accept spiritualism. They are temperate, frown upon tobacco, eat no meat, and cancer is unknown among them. From this the vegetarians may perhaps draw some comfort. Being a species of Quaker they are non-combatants. They amassed considerable wealth through their industry, but the money appears to be slipping away with the membership.

The explanation of the Shakers' always small numbers and their present decline is to be found, of course, in their doctrine of celibacy. They do not oppose marriage for others, but they hold that the wedded state prevents the attainment of "angelic orders." The Shakers have been so unique a factor in American life and so wholesomely picturesque that their decline is more than pathetic. It is an ethical disaster.

DANGER IN CIGARETTE SMOKING FOR WOMEN.

[New York Evening Post.]

Will women of the future smoke? Not if they will read what medical men have to say about angina pectoris. So far cases of this most distressing malady have been comparatively rare among women; but Dr. Osler declared in a recent lecture delivered before the Royal College of Physicians of London that we may look forward to an increasing number of cases of heart pain and of the mild type of angina in women, with the rapid increase of cigarette smoking. He saw last winter in Italy an American woman whose daily allowance of cigarettes was never under 25. She had cardiac pain every morning, which made dressing difficult. He notes the interesting fact that very heavy smokers may die a vagus inhibition death, just such as we see in angina pectoris. Three robust, healthy persons of his acquaintance, not known to have had heart disease, but all incessant smokers of very strong cigars, died suddenly in this way, without warning; one while walking, another while sitting on a chair at his club, a third on the beach after bathing. Even when they do not die, patients afflicted with diverse forms of angina feel sure they are going to, so excruciating is the agony. However, there is one thing to be said in favor of this painful malady: it kills late and it kills quickly.

SIMPLE MATHEMATICS

Anyone who knows will agree with us that there is no better germ killer and general disinfectant, as well as being a wonderful cleanser and purifier, than

Cabot's Sulpho-Napthol

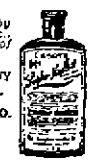

What is more,—this efficient "Liquid Cleanliness" accomplishes its mission at a minimum cost.

To be sure it has imitators. All good things have. Some substitutes can be bought for half the price; admitting this fact and admitting also that they may have some virtue, even under these conditions, they are more expensive in the end than the genuine.

With Cabot's Sulpho-Napthol it is necessary to use only one-fifth the quantity that manufacturers of substitutes recommend necessary for their products in order to obtain results.

Therefore when you buy the original you are getting the genuine and besides that it only costs one-fifth as much in the end as doubtful imitations. Any reliable dealer will endorse these statements.

Sold only in yellow parkages by druggists and grocers. 10c., 25c., 50c., 75c. and $1.00. Beware of imitations.

All That Any Soap Will Do —And Better

Madame, you now have in your home at least four different kinds of cleansers—laundry soap, grit soap, toilet soap, washing powder. Perhaps you have even more than this.

This assortment of soap is expensive. Besides they are wasteful—they soak away and evaporate.

And not one of them does its own kind of work as well, as easily or as cheaply as does Naptha Cream Soap.

Besides it cannot do any harm. It cannot injure the daintiest lace. It cannot fade colors. It cannot make your hands hard and sore.

Naptha Cream Soap

It has taken us 12 years to learn how to make this soap perfect.

Ordinary naptha soaps are in a hard cake filled with resin. The resin hurts your hands, the colors and the fabrics.

NAPTHA CREAM SOAP is a paste—it comes in a can. It has no resin—no acid—no free alkali as other soaps have.

It allows four times as much naptha to do your cleansing for you.

So it cleans four times as easily.

This soap saves you money too. A 10c can goes much farther than two 5c cakes of common soap.

Not Like Other Naptha Soaps. No Resin. No Acid. No Alkali.

Your Money Back

All this is good news—and it's true. You can prove it at our risk.

Buy a 10c can today. If it doesn't please you, if it isn't as good as we say, your grocer will give you your money back.

NURSE IN VANDERBILT FAMILY.

Swedish Woman at One Time in Charge of Present Countess Tells of Her Life in Household.

[Jacksonville, Ill., Weekly Journal.]

A well known and highly respected resident of this city is Mrs. Augusta Colby who has a somewhat romantic history, a part of which she kindly gave the Journal by request. She said:

"I was born in Sweden and came to this country when 17 years of age and I well remember my beautiful native land and while I wanted to better my lot I left with regret. There were six girls on the boat and we had a merry time on the way, though we were kept strictly apart from a number of young men on board. We landed in New York all right and I remained in the city instead of hastening west.

After we had been there about six months we were walking in Central Park one day when Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt's housekeeper saw me and seemed pleased with my appearance and approached me and began a conversation. She said Mrs. Vanderbilt wanted a nurse for her two-year-old daughter, Gladys, the one who not long ago married the Hungarian count with the curious name, and the result was that I was employed and remained with the family two years.

"There were 18 employes in the house and these included the butler, housekeeper, chef or chief cook, waiters, nurses of the children, chambermaids and so on. The family always treated me well and my little charge, Gladys, was lovely. I had no work to do but look after her and had a chambermaid to do the work in my room. We always went out in the carriage with the children, never walked, with them anywhere, and had a coachman and a footman. The horses were very fine and Mr. Vanderbilt took much pride in them. The parents were generally so occupied that they saw but little of their children. Dr. McLain used to call every morning and inquire after the health of the household and prescribe if necessary.

"In the summer the whole family went to a warm weather resort called Madison and there we had more freedom, though still the children were always carefully guarded. Sometimes I had occasion to be at some of the grand receptions in the Fifth Avenue mansions and the elegance was indeed wonderful.

"While with the Vanderbilt family I made the acquaintance of a great many aristocratic people; that is, I came to know them by sight. Among them were the Goulds, Anna, George, Helen, who were always lovely, and many others. We all knew the old commodore's widow, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, who died not many years ago. The Vanderbilts had a great many cares and were always more or less anxious regarding the children and themselves, too, for that matter. I have often thought that after all the great wealth they possessed carried with it more trouble and care than it was worth.

"We had good quarters, good pay and were treated well, yet there were many drawbacks to the position. In the first place we were not allowed at all to associate with our own people. We could not go to see them nor visit with them. The family seemed to fear contagious diseases or something of the sort and we could have our friends to see us only at the house and for only half an hour at a time and then all was carefully guarded. It was really like a gilded cage in some respects and yet after these years I sometimes think I would like to be back there again at my old post if I could have such a sweet charge as I had when there at first.

"I think the most noted event I say, while there was a wedding at the Shepherds, a sister of Mrs. Vanderbilt. It was grand indeed and the cost must have been immense. When I left I had quite a sum of money saved for we had almost no opportunity to spend anything while in the service of the family. When I left Mr. Vanderbilt spoke kindly to me and said he hoped I would go West and marry some rich man."

WARMER THAN NORMAL APRIL.

Month Just Passed Showed Deficiency in Precipitation Compared With Other Years.

The month of April, just concluded, showed a deficiency in precipitation, as compared with the normal, of 2.12 inches. Since January 1 the year has shown an accumulated deficiency in rain of 5.51 inches. On the other hand, the monthly report of the Providence Weather Bureau station, shows that April was 4.3 degrees warmer, taken day by day, than the normal April, although the maximum temperature record was not touched. The average temperature for April was 51, the highest since the bureau was established here.

The mean barometer in April was 29.98, with the highest, 30.40, the seventeenth, and the lowest, 29.56, the seventh. The highest temperature was 74, the fifteenth, and the lowest, 31 the thirteenth. The greatest daily range was 31 degrees, the fourteenth, when the mercury went from 39 to 70 degrees. The least range was 5 degrees, the twenty-sixth. Since January 1 there has been an accumulated excess of temperature of 432 degrees. In other words, the year 1910 has been 3.6 degrees warmer than usual.

The total precipitation was 1.64 inches. The greatest precipitation in 24 hours was .81 of an inch the twenty-sixth. The highest April rain total was last year, when 5.07 inches were recorded.

The prevailing direction of the wind was northwest, with a total movement of 7,751 miles, and an average hourly velocity of 10.7 miles. The maximum velocity was 34 miles from the north the twenty-eighth.

There were eight clear days in April 12 partly cloudy and 10 cloudy days. On nine days .01 of an inch or more of precipitation occurred. The miscellaneous phenomena of which the summary makes note include a solar halo the nineteenth, a lunar halo the fifteenth, fog the fifth, sixth, seventh, eighteenth, nineteenth, twentieth, twenty-first, twenty-third, twenty-fourth, twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth. A thunderstorm occurred the twenty-sixth, and killing frost the eleventh and thirteenth. A light frost occurred the twenty-ninth.

BASE BALL SLANG.

[Augusta Herald.]

The consensus of opinion seems to be that a base ball story in unimpeachible English would be odd enough to be interesting, but that as a steady diet it would soon pall upon the "fans," who have become accustomed to that slang which is so distinctively a part of the atmosphere of the game. It conveys more to their minds to say that the man at the plate slapped the pellet for four bags than gravely to announce that the batter knocked a ball which enabled him to score a home run. The "hunt" and the "bush leaguer" have become inextricately interwoven with the speech of today. The "nicknames" of the teams have practically superseded the names of the towns whose tags they bear, and lend life and color to the descriptive story. This so-called slang, when it is spontaneous, makes for brevity. It present a picture in a word.

WESTWARD HAS NO RIVAL.

New Herreshoff Schooner Yacht Unequalled in England.

Alexander S. Cochrane's Boat, However, Will Find Plenty of Sport on Her European Visit.

[London Letter to New York Herald.]

That yachtsmen of the United States, far from being disturbed at British yachtsmen's unfavorable reception of their ocean race plans, are sending a new Herreshoff schooner to Europe for the racing under international rules, is hailed in London with a considerable amount of pleasure mingled with no little foreboding, because there is no English schooner of any other kind of racing yacht which can possibly hope to compete with success against the new American boat.

The active blue ribbon of sailing in Europe is at present held by the Germania, a new German vessel, which set up records with astonishing ease at Cowes last year, and it is recognized that the Westward, commanded by Captain Barr of America Cup race fame, will be a keen and dangerous rival, while all experts agree that she can easily beat any boat that England can for the present sail against her.

English yachtsmen are nevertheless looking forward with great interest to the arrival of the Westward at Southampton, where Mr. Alexander Smith Cochran is taking her first in order to rig her for racing before she proceeds to Kiel for her first race in European waters. Then she goes to Cowes. And what will yachtsmen there see? Fights for the various cups between the American and the German giants and the comparatively obsolete English yachts, in which the latter will be completely "out of it."

Commenting on the situation which will be found at Cowes this season, the yachting expert of Field says:

"It is a remarkable circumstance that an American yachtsman should build a beautiful schooner like the Westward and bring her into Cowes Roads and upon arrival that he should not be able to find a British schooner yacht of sufficiently modern build to race against her on level terms. The nearest approach to a serious competitor against the American which the British have is the Fife schooner Cicely, owned by Mr. Cecil Whittaker—a very fine vessel in her way, but nearly 10 years old—and therefore all experts agree that the old country is in for a series of defeats during the coming season.

"There is no doubt," continues the Field, "that Mr. Whittaker will drive the old Cicely for all that she is worth, but she cannot be driven so fast as a modern vessel. If good seamanship on behalf of Embling, her skipper, and pluck and keenness on the part of the owner can bring the Cicely within half of this Yankee clipper, no doubt the old Fife boat will be there, but as an international trial, Britain vs. America, or Fife vs. Herreshoff, the contest between the Cicely and the Westward will be of no value, because the former was built under a previous rule eight years ago and the latter is the last word under the existing rule.

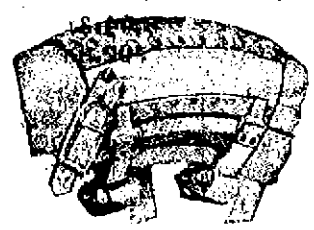

"Yachtsmen, however, will hope that the Westward will find plenty of sport in her European visit. On an open sea course with a good breeze the German schooners Germania and Meteor can travel at a mighty speed. Send them along from Spithead to the Owers lightship, with the blue and rolling Channel sea crested with merry white horses, when the gall sou'wester 'bends the gallant mast' and the lee decks are seething in the white water, send them along when those great German ships get full advantage from the strength of their generally too heavy gear, when it takes 35 brawny lads to budge the main sheet, when the speed rises to 15 or 16 knots and the flying scud astern hides the glinting wings of the following sea mew in the mist. That will be the day when the Herreshoff clipper Westward will want all her speed and all her weatherliness to win the prize from the Meteor and the Germania. Would that a modern British schooner were here to meet her!"

It is the popularity of the cutter classes to which is due the fact that no large racing schooner has been built in recent years in England; and, as usual, America has slipped in and taken the wind out of England's sails.

Among the schooners which are eligible to race against the Westward, the Field adds: "The Germania, Meteor, Hamburg, Cicely and Susanne are the only vessels which could have any pretentions to give her a close match. The Germania, belonging to Dr. Krupp von Holden und Halbach and the German Emperor's Meteor will probably only attain success in strong reaching winds. The other three are British built vessels. The old Watson schooner Hamburg, nee Rainbow, is outclassed. The Cicely, in her ninth season, can scarcely be expected to do well against a new vessel. The Susanne, however, is a type of boat which is not easy to beat in light winds. It would have been interesting to have seen this little vessel specially rigged for light winds with new canvas and new copper. Placed at the bottom of the class and in receipt of 2 minutes, 20 seconds time allowance for every metre of rating in a 50 mile course, it is by no means certain that the little Fife schooner would be readily defeated even by the Westward."

AN EMERGENCY TIRE PROTECTOR.

Automobilists are giving particular attention to the new emergency tire sleeve which is now on the market. Along the head portions of each sleeve are attached metal strips which are engaged by hooks, to which are secured straps passing around the felly of the wheel. One of these straps is non-adjustable for length, but the other is wound around a small drum which is ratchet-retained within a small housing fitted with a yoke piece for securing it to the felly. In applying the sleeve it can be drawn tightly over the tire by means of a wrench which fits the spindle of the ratchet wheel on whose drum the adjustable band is secured. This construction is clearly shown in the illustration.

TORTURED BY ECZEMA

"When my boy was six years old, he suffered terribly with eczema. He could neither sit still nor lie quietly in bed, for the itching was dreadful. He would irritate spots by scratching and that only made them worse. A doctor treated him and we tried almost everything, but the eczema spread for two years until it very nearly covered the back part of his leg to the knee. Finally I got Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills. I used them in the morning and that evening I used them again and the improvement, even in those few hours, was surprising, the inflammation seemed to be so much less. I used two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, the same of the Pills and the Soap and my boy was cured. My son is now in his seventeenth year and he has never had a return of the eczema. I took care of a friend's child that had eczema on its face and limbs and I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. They acted on the child just as they did on my son and it has never returned. Mrs. A. J. Cochran, 1823 Columbia Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 20, 1909."

Pleasant Reading for the Fat.

What a simple and inexpensive solving of the fat woman's problem the Marmola Prescription Tablets provide. She takes one of these harmless, pleasant little tablets after each meal and at bedtime and loses from 12 to 16 ounces of fat each day, and yet suffers no harm, creates no disturbances inwardly, and produces no wrinkles. This elegant preparation (made exactly in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription) has rendered exercising and dieting for the reduction of excess flesh as superfluous as a fifth wheel. A further recommendation is that it is the least expensive fat reducer on the market, a large case (costing only 75 cents) from any druggist or by mail from the Marmola Co., 711 Farmer Bldg., Detroit Mich., containing a quantity of tablets large enough to give very decided results in most every case.

Notice the Two Hods in the Base of the Crawford Ranges

One is an Ash Hod into which the ashes fall through a chute—all of them—and are easily emptied. The other Hod is for Coal. This feature saves lots of trouble and is patented.

Then there is the wonderful Single Damper (patented); slide the knob to "kindle," "bake" or "check," the range does the rest.

The Oven has cup-joint heat flues that heat it all over alike.

The Patented Grates save coal and trouble.

A want ad in the Daily News will sell a house and lot—or a lot, or a farm or acreage. If you were going to buy real estate you'd watch the real estate ads in The Daily News, and it would be a strange sort of real estate buyer who wouldn't do the same thing. Thus it happens that the real estate ads in the News initiate most of this town's real estate sales.

ELIMINATION OF THE HORSE.

Issue of 100,000 Automobile Licenses Shows the Great Increase of Motor Vehicles in New York.

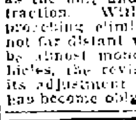

[New York World.]

The issue of the one hundred thousandth automobile license at Albany furnishes a new standard with which to measure the extraordinary increase of motor vehicles in New York. According to Secretary of State Koenig the daily average of applications for licenses exceeds 250, most of which come from Manhattan and Brooklyn. On the basis of an average valuation of $1,000 the cars licensed represent a weekly investment of $1,500,000.

The figures merely serve to corroborate the results of everyday observation. The multiplicity of taxicabs alone, to cite only one phase of the increase of power vehicles, has been phenomenal. The statistics serve in particular to show how rapidly the elimination of the horse by the gas engine is progressing, at least as respects pleasure or passenger vehicles. How horse traction elsewhere is suffering from the competition of power cars is seen in London, where, according to the statement of Sir John Macdonald before the Royal Automobile Club, only 110,000 horses survive of the 450,000 quartered in that city in 1900. On the streets of New York hansom cabs are now conspicuous by their rarity.

Secretary Koenig notes a remarkable increase in the number of "poor men's cars" registered, and the fact is suggestive both as an index of prosperity and in its relation to the higher scale of living. An investment of $1,500,000 a week in automobiles is at the rate of $78,000,000 a year. To this first cost must be added the outgo for repairs, running expenses, chauffeurs' wages, automobile haberdashery and the minor accessories of equipment—clocks, speedometers, etc., together with the amount disbursed in road-house suppers and other forms of touring hospitality. The grand total cannot be even approximately estimated. But that it has involved the diversion of an immense aggregate sum from former channels of expenditure is without question. It is not assumed that the grocer and butcher have suffered, but there is no doubt that some compensating economies have been necessitated of which dealers feel the effects.

One important aspect of the increase of power and the decline of horse traction is its bearing on legislation affecting vehicle traffic. The existing laws were based on the horse as the unit and main factor of street traction. With the horse now approaching elimination and the time not far distant when the highways will be almost monopolized by power vehicles, the revision of legislation and its adjustment to the new conditions has become obligatory.

ENGLAND PLUNGED IN DEEPEST GLOOM.

early weakness was considered as purely sentimental.

Messages are pouring into the palace from all parts of the empire and foreign countries, expressing the hope that better news will be issued soon.

King Edward's first serious attack of bronchial trouble, accompanied with symptoms of asthma, was experienced a year ago. Since that time His Majesty has suffered several recurrences of the malady, including one during his recent visit at Biarritz. Each attack proved worse than the preceding one, and more difficult to conquer. The present illness came suddenly and without warning.

Callers at the palace today had their worst fears confirmed by the palace officials. "I am very sorry to say," said one of the King's close entourage, with a shake of the head, "that the papers have not exaggerated His Majesty's condition. It is very grave."

There are unmistakable signs that all the members of the palace entourage are greatly alarmed. One government officer, who, in his official capacity, attended the audiences of the King Wednesday and yesterday, said: "The King looked very ill Wednesday morning, and very much worse Thursday. The chief outward symptoms was extreme hoarseness. He was scarcely able to speak at times, but insisted on continuing his audiences."

On one occasion during the audiences, when the king's condition was the subject of remark, His Majesty said "There is a return of what I had at Biarritz. I got clear of it then, but caught another cold at the theatre. However, I will be all right in a few days."

Ambassador Reid, who visited the king at Buckingham palace Wednesday, said today: "I went to the palace on the king's request, to talk over some future engagements. The king then looked well and was in good spirits. He was, however, coughing a great deal, and complained that his cough was distressing and very tiring. However, he talked for fully half an hour. I thought at the time that he hardly realized how ill he was."

BALLOON FIRED ON.

Much Information Gathered About Comet, Venu, Moon and Sun.

EAST HADDAM, Conn., May 6.—On landing here early today from an aeronautical journey for the purpose of making astronomical observations, particularly of Halley's comet, the occupants of balloon Massachusetts stated that they were fired on by some unknown person about three miles north of Manchester, just before sunrise. The person used a rifle, and, while the bullet did not strike the balloon or its passengers, it whistled uncomfortably close to their ears.

Professor David Todd of the Amherst College observatory, who with Mrs. Todd and Charles J. Glidden comprised the party, reported that his observations of Halley's comet, as well as of the planet Venus, the moon and the sun were very successful, and that he had gathered much information.

The balloon, which rose from Pittsfield, Mass., at 2:15 this morning, landed in a Russian settlement five miles from Long Island sound and seven miles from Colchester—an air-line distance of 80 miles. The time of the voyage was 3 hours, 55 minutes, and the highest elevation reached was 7,000 feet. After landing the aeronauts loaded their balloon into the only means of transportation available—a rickety Russian cart—and rode seven miles to Colchester, where they boarded a train for Springfield. Professor Todd was too fatigued to speak of his observations, but said he would have some very interesting information to divulge when he reached Springfield.

CANCELS BROOKLYN TRIP.

Taft Advised Not to Be Away During Vote on Railroad Bill.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—President Taft arrived in Washington from his western tour at 6:30 o'clock this morning. He remained in his car until 7:30, when he was driven to the White House.

The President today cancelled his engagement to go to Brooklyn, N. Y., May 12 to attend the launching of battleship Florida and a banquet at night by the employes of the Brooklyn navy yard. This action was taken that the President may be in Washington next week during the final vote in the Senate on the railroad bill. He was advised that he ought not to be away from the Capital at such a critical time, and he reluctantly decided to forego the trip. The President has not, however, cancelled his engagement to go to Passaic, N. J., Monday night, May 9. He will return from Passaic that night and be in Washington Tuesday morning.

DEATH INSTANTANEOUS.

Eight Bodies Removed from Alabama Mine, and Rescue Delayed.

PALOS, Ala., May 6.—Eight bodies were removed shortly after daylight today from Mine No. 3 of the Palos Coal & Coke Company, where between 100 and 150 miners were entrapped by explosion yesterday. The condition of the bodies indicated that death was instantaneous. After the removal of the bodies it was found necessary to send a force of miners into the workings to straighten the brattices and to prevent cave-ins. This and the presence of after-damp delayed the work of rescue several hours.

Among the identified dead is C. H. Stansberry, assistant mine foreman. Among the dead in the mine is said to be H. A. McArdle, whose brother is president of the Amalgamated Association of Tin and Steel Workers in Pennsylvania. President McArdle is en route for this place.

RAILROAD BILL WILL GO.

Republican Senators Claim Eight More Votes Than Are Needed.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Senators Elkins and Crane had an early but brief conference with the President this morning as to the railroad bill in the Senate, and arranged to call on him again tomorrow, when he will see other Republican leaders of the Senate on the same subject. They told the President with emphasis that the Republican combination which has been formed in the Senate is sufficiently strong to put through the bill as it is finally needed to by the President and his advisers.

Soon after the two Senators reached the Capitol they informed their associates that they had 55 votes—eight more than are needed to defeat every long and short haul amendment that may be offered. This number includes many Democratic senators.

STRIKERS PLAY BALL.

Boss Carpenters Adhere to Their Price, and Coal Dealers Fairly Well Satisfied.

The strike situation seems unchanged. The coal dealers have secured some help, and helpers is what they have been looking for, and say they are doing all right. The proprietors are still on the drivers' seat and are doing well.

The employing carpenters had a meeting Thursday evening and decided to stick to their offer of $3.00 a day, and not to vary from it. The journeymen carpenters do not seem to be affected by this, but continue as heretofore.

This afternoon the carpenters and teamsters have gone to Wellington Park, where a base ball game is on, the sides being Carpenters vs. Coal Teamers.

Some of the coal dealers say they are quite satisfied with the existing conditions, and declare that the strike is a good thing for them. In the first place they say, what is undoubtedly true, that it does not require any great activity to keep pace with the present business. While their regular men have not been at work all the week, they say they have all the help they require, and could have more if they employed all who have come to them for jobs. This morning it is claimed that three men went the rounds of the yards, looking for some one to hire them.

The dealers have been driving themselves, and some of them think it is a big thing for the business that the bosses have gone out and had an opportunity to meet their customers at home and learn some of the conditions under which coal is delivered. Some of them have made suggestions as to methods which might save expense in the delivery of coal at residences. A coal team is not an infrequent sight on the streets and it should be said in justice to the striking drivers and helpers that there is no interference with any one who sees fit to drive one of these teams they have left.

MINEOLA COUNCIL SOCIAL.

Mineola Council, No. 3, Degree of Pocahontas, held its annual May social in Realty hall Thursday evening, with a large attendance. The hall was decorated with palms and other potted plants, loaned by Mr. Oscar Schultz, and presented a pleasing appearance. Lodler's orchestra, which furnished the music, was hidden behind a screen of palms. The committee in charge of the social consisted of Mrs. Laura Scott, Mrs. Cora Snyder, Mrs. Anna Bacheller, Mrs. Louise D. Browley, Mrs. Charles Matley, Mrs. Margaret Wood and Mrs. May O'Connell.

FISHING BUSINESS QUIET.

First Mackerel Arrival of the Season, But Only a Few Seen In.

Things are quiet in the fishing business today. W. E. Briebtman was in with three barrels of scup and most of the others were yet to be heard from; but then this is Friday, the day after the fair, so far as selling fish is concerned.

The first mackerel of the season arrived today. Of course there have been mackerel caught in traps, but this is the first arrival of a real mackerel vessel with a catch. It was the power sloop Jessie, and she had 29 mackerel, which were sold on the boat at 43 cents each. This seems a good price, but the catch was small. It was larger, however, than many a mackerel boat hovering about southern waters has made all the spring.

A restaurant keeper bought six mackerel of the catch landed here today. The six weighed 22½ pounds, and cost him just $3, or 13½ cents a pound. He secured four from the fish and calculates that mackerel at 13 1-3 cents a pound is the cheapest first-class fish he has been able to buy for so long that they seem absolute bargains. One would look several times at a four-pound mackerel before he would pay 50 cents for one, and yet it is cheap.

BOTH PARTIES AGREE.

Westerly Manslaughter Cases Continued Two Weeks.

WESTERLY, May 6.—A continuance of two weeks has been decided upon in the manslaughter cases of John and Catrina Cisco, alleged to have sold the liquor which caused the death of one of the 14 poisoned whiskey victims in this and surrounding towns within the last month, which were to have come up in the Third district court there today. The continuance was taken by agreement of the parties concerned.

NEW YORK, May 6, Wall Street—The stock market opened with Amalgamated Copper at 65⅝, American Beet Sugar 36, American Smelting & Refining 75, Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe 108⅜, Baltimore & Ohio 109, Brooklyn Rapid Transit 78, Canadian Pacific 184⅝, Chesapeake & Ohio 85¾, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul 138½, Erie 23¾, Great Northern preferred 133½, Great Northern Ore Certificates 62½, Interborough Metropolitan 20½, Interborough Metropolitan preferred 54½, Missouri, Kansas & Texas 41⅝, National Lead 75½, New York Central 115½, Northern Pacific 128⅝, Pennsylvania 131½, Reading 157⅞, Rock Island 43¾, Southern Pacific 124, Union Pacific 180½ and 180, United States Steel 81½ to 82¼, United States Steel preferred 117¼, and Wabash preferred 43½.

10—The alarm in the London stock market over the condition of the King of England was reflected in wide declines in the opening prices here. Losses reached as much as a point in practically all international issues. Sales of 6,500 shares of United States Steel were made at 81½ and 82¼, compared with yesterday's closing price of 82⅞, and 1,000 shares of Union Pacific at 180½ and 180, compared with 181⅝ last night. Rock Island lost 1⅛, Reading and Canadian Pacific 1½ and St. Paul 1⅝. Measures of support made themselves felt promptly, and caused fractional rallies after the opening.

11—The rally brought the list close to yesterday's final prices, at which level the selling was resumed, but the market did not yield materially, and rallied again. Brooklyn Transit rose 1 on active dealings, and Missouri Pacific, Pittsburg, C. C. & St. Louis and Kansas City Southern preferred also gained 1.

Noon—Money on call, easy, at 3¾ per cent; prime mercantile paper, 5 to 5½ per cent. Buying, which checked the break in prices caused by the King of England's illness, was not pursued. News was awaited of the outcome. Meantime selling of the coppers caused prices to droop. Amalgamated Copper lost 1⅛. At noon the tone was steady and dealings were very light. Bonds were irregular.

ROGERS BADLY BEATEN.

Suffers Overwhelming Defeat at Hands of La Salle.

Makes a Good Fight Until the Fifth and Then Goes to Pieces in the Field.

The Rogers High School base ball team suffered an overwhelming defeat at the hands of La Salle Academy Thursday afternoon. The visitors have the reputation of being one of the fastest teams in Providence, and so the result was not surprising. However, Rogers made a good fight until the fifth inning, but then La Salle secured wo runs and the lead, on clean hitting and after that Rogers went to pieces. The scoring started in the second inning. McSherry took first base on an error, went to third when Underwood threw wild to Eddy, and scored when Arnold had a passed ball. In this inning Rogers made the first of two fast double plays. With a man on second and third, Tutte drove a liner into Gardner's hands, who threw to Ober, catching the man on second base. Underwood brought in Rogers's only run in the same inning. He went around to third on errors, and scored when Baxter handled Brennan's grounder poorly.

There was no more scoring until the fifth inning. Then Hanlon and McGuire singled, advancing on Baxter's sacrifice. Noon rose to the occasion with a neat hit, bringing in both runs. In the next inning McSherry was passed, was sacrificed to second, stole third, and came in on Hanlon's hit.

In the eighth all kinds of things happened, with the result that La Salle scored four times. McSherry singled, McDevitt sacrificed, and Tutte was safe on an error. Hanlon drove out a hit, but Jemail's quick throw to the plate caught McSherry. McGuire was safe on an error, then Baxter's hit scored two runs, and Noon's two more. Moore was injured sliding to second and retired. Gildea and McDevitt both scored in the ninth, bringing La Salle's total of 10.

Baxter at second played a great game for the visitors, and his one-hand catch of Underwood's drive was the best seen on a local diamond in a long while. Noon played well until injured. Hanlon was the star batter, making four singles in five times at bat.

Rogers made a better showing at the bat than in other games, but went to pieces in critical places in the field. The opposing pitcher was left-handed, but still Rogers made nine hits. Jemail, Ober and Sayer excelled, each with two. Gardner played well in the field, and made possible the two double plays by his fast fielding. The score:

JOHN LA FARGE HAS A RELAPSE.

Mr. John La Farge, who rallied recently from the after-effects of the grip, has had a relapse and was taken Thursday to the Hahnemann Hospital. It was said there last night that he is critically ill but was resting at the moment.

ONLY ONE BID MADE.

Proposal for City Printing Too High, with Local Work Alone.

Alderman Reach an Understanding on Contract for Furnishing the Synagogue.

The Board of Aldermen held the weekly meeting Thursday evening in the aldermanic chamber, to accommodate the large "gallery." Fireworks were promised, the continuation of the talk over the contract for furnishing the synagogue, and for just two hours there was discussion of this matter. It developed that the board had no occasion for signing the contract, the contract was legal without its signature; the contractor has at length made everything good and will receive a payment on the contract.

The bids for the City Documents were opened. Were is used in the sense that "we" is used so often, as there was only one. The Board decided that the city would pay so high for the satisfaction of having some say the composition was done in Newport that it could not afford the luxury, and would have the composition done elsewhere and save the treasury from $750 to $750.

Mayor Boyle presided and all the members were present, besides many who are not members.

The weekly pay rolls were approved, as follows: Streets and highways, $1,-$15.13; police, $710.42; fire department, $430.48; city officers, $236.01; public buildings, $14 54; firemen in theatres, $36.

The bill of the Newport Hospital for the care of the sick poor, $504, was approved.

Renewals of licenses were granted to William Quigley for pool table, Timothy F. Sullivan for eating house (two), Charles O. Bergkman and Walter C. Banks, eating houses; Charles A. Wilcox, peddler; Rachel Carter, intelligence office; Reuben Mirman, junk gatherer, and four gasoline permits.

There was some talk over the Mirman license. A Mirman is now awaiting trial on a charge of selling to a minor and Inspector Tobin asked that his application be laid over. This was opposed by Alderman Mahoney, who said the trial might be delayed for months, and at the end he might be found not guilty. He thought the license should be granted as usual and if Mirman is found guilty it can be revoked. This was done.

Bids for printing the City Documents for 1909 and the tax lists for 1910 were next in order. The Mercury office bid $2.70 per page for the Documents, and $3.99 per page for the tax lists, with 30 cents each for binding 750 copies of the tax lists with the Documents, all the work to be done in Newport and by Newport people. There are 750 copies of the Documents and 3,250 of the tax lists. 2,500 of the latter to be bound in paper at the price given for printing.

Mayor Boyle announced that there was but one bid. The city clerk, in answer to inquiry, stated that last year the price was $1.80 per page for the Documents and $3.24 for the tax list. He did some figuring at the request of the board, and while he was figuring Mr. Mahoney said he understood that it would be impossible to have the work done by the time the books are desired July 15, if the composition is done only in Newport. It was evident from the difference in the bids that it was to cost the city much more. The Documents the past five years seemed to give satisfaction, and he thought it would be well to re-advertise for bids under last year's conditions, allowing for composition out of town and the rest of the work to be done in town. The absence of other bids shows that there can be no competition under the conditions imposed by the board.

Mr. Shepley asked what the total difference was; the mayor had already announced the difference per page as 96 cents for the documents and 74 cents for the tax lists. The city clerk said roughly in the vicinity of $500, supposing the Documents were the same size as last year. Mr. Mahoney thought they would be as large, as there had been more meetings of the Council. The city clerk said the long building ordinance would not be in, but several long ones would, and it seemed as though the size would be nearly the same. Later, after more figuring, he announced that from $730 to $750 seemed to be the difference.

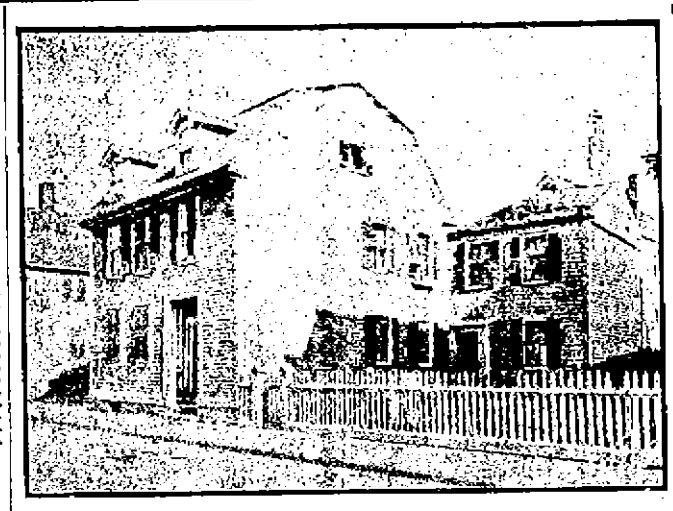

The Board voted to reject the bid and authorize the city clerk to re-advertise under the conditions allowed last year, the linotype composition to be done out of town if the contractor desired, other work to be done here.

Alderman Shepley reported that a temporary dump had been secured on Wellington avenue, which would last some weeks, and the street commissioner had agreed to put up the screen fence and prohibit the burning of papers when the wind is from the north and the smoke would bother the residents.

The board was then ready to tackle the other subject on the table, the bill of the Anthony & Cowell Company, to which three hours had been given Tuesday and many other hours at other times. The Providence firm had its inning Tuesday; the trustees of the synagogue were present at this meeting and President Levy spoke at some length on what had been done. The furniture in the synagogue was not suited to the place, but so much required to be done on the building, after many years of disuse, that nothing could be done about re-furnishing until 1909, when there was an opportunity to secure furnishings appropriate to the building. The trustees secured estimates from various dealers, trying to come as near the makers as possible, and none of the stock furnishings seemed at all appropriate to the synagogue, which is such a fine building that the furnishings should be in accord.

Finally Mr. Stoneman had a sample bench made up by Mr. George I. Steele of this city. It seemed in every

OLD WINDMILL BURNED.

Engine House and Blacksmith Shop Also Gone.

Spectacular Blaze Destroys Structures in Middletown Belonging to Sheriff Anthony.

What was formerly the old Anthony windmill on the West Main road, Middletown, was totally destroyed by fire Thursday evening, together with the engine house and blacksmith shop connected with it. It caused a great illumination of the heavens about 10 o'clock, and only by the presence of Officer Esleeck in the outer Broadway section was the ringing of the Newport alarm prevented. There were no facilities for fighting the fire, but Sheriff Anthony, the owner, feels that had there been a hydrant on the road in that vicinity when he turned out he could have called upon the Newport firemen and they would have saved a greater part of the property, even though they would have had a long run. As it was, he and his neighbors were compelled to stand and witness the buildings go to ashes, leaving nothing but metal and stone this morning. They are all giving thanks that there was practically no wind, for in almost any direction were buildings at a little distance which might have been fired had sparks been driven against them. Except for tools taken from the blacksmith shop, nothing was saved. There was no insurance.

The first seen of the fire was about 9:30, when people going through Chase's lane saw the window of the engine house illuminated by a ruddy glare. The alarm was given in the little settlement, and a number turned out, including Pascal M. Conley, who had the blacksmith shop, and the contents of the structure were practically all saved. All that remain this morning to mark the site are the charred embers of the woodwork, the chimney of the blacksmith shop, the wrecked engine and the fragments of the heavy stones.

The mill was used by Boyd Brothers for grinding corn, and was operated by a gasoline engine, which was run by Clifton Boyd for his father, Frank Boyd. It was in operation Thursday afternoon, and as there have been slight fires before because of the over-heating of the mutller it is believed that the same cause was responsible for the blaze this time. A fresh supply of gasoline had been received only a day or two ago, but it was in an underground tank, and while the gas from this rose through the vent pipe and burned like a torch for hours the tank did not explode, as many feared it would do.

Clifton Boyd started from his home in Portsmouth this morning, as usual, to go to his work, not knowing the mill had gone. His father was at Nowtown at the time of the fire and took the last car on the Providence line for home. At that time he saw the heavens illuminated, and as the car proceeded this way those on board made frequent guesses as to the location of the fire. As Mr. Boyd's home was reached it seemed sure that the fire was in Lawton's valley and Mr. Boyd continued on to Locust avenue, then to trudge back home in ignorance until this morning that it was his property which was burning.

On the other hand, in various parts of Newport the illumination was noted and automobilists sped to the scene until there was quite a gathering of them in the vicinity. About the island many farmers saw the flames, and hitched up and drove out. The car schedule did not warrant people flocking out of Newport at that hour with expectation of returning, and there were but few who trusted to walking.

When one left the local car at the One Mile Corner at 10 o'clock it seemed as if the fire were surely on the Bull estate and a few steps farther would bring him into hot smoke. While some continued on to locate the fire definitely, others were disposed to go back and pull a box, but the officer had come out on the same car and desired something more definite before he would allow the alarm to be rung.

Those who saw the fire witnessed a spectacular sight, even though at a distance. The engine house and blacksmith shop which adjoined the mill went in short order, but the mill with its oak frame and boarding stood a tower in the air for a long time. First it was a solid shaft of fire, then the boarding burned off and the ribs stood erect, while the flames behind caused them to stand out in strong contrast against the light.

Sheriff Anthony spent the evening in town and left on the 8:50 car. When he went into the house he noticed nothing unusual about the mill, which stood back in an open field beyond. He was reading a paper, when voices were heard outside and his wife drawing back the shade saw fire. He says that when he went out the flames were confined to the engine structure and were running up the southern exterior of the mill, but had not made much start there. He remained by the embers until 3 o'clock this morning, when there seemed to be no longer any danger that the fire would spread. After it was well advanced and there was some feeling that it would not burn out quick enough, he called up the city fire headquarters and asked what assistance could be given to make things safer, but it was not believed that much could be done, as there was no water available and the chemical is not very effective in an open fire.

When the water company laid its mains from Portsmouth there was some talk of a hydrant in that vicinity, and now there are regrets that it was not provided. Some of the Middletown people are today talking of the desirability of placing hydrants, where this can be done, in communities that are thickly settled, in order that the Newport firemen may be called if needed.

In the burning of the mill one of the old landmarks of that section of the island has passed away. Its age cannot be readily ascertained, but it has certainly well passed the century mark. The mill has been in the family of Sheriff Anthony for many years and was owned by him, while the gasoline engine, which cost $600, was the property of his son Arthur, who is a motorman on the Providence road. Arthur conducted the mill a number of years, having begun this work when a boy, but of late the Boyds have been grinding there rather than at their windmill in Portsmouth. The old grindstones were still in excellent shape, but located as they were on the second floor of the structure they were subjected to intense heat and were therefore cracked into small fragments, even before they fell.

A TRIP TO SOUTHERN EUROPE.

Mr. Commerford Gives First of Two Lectures Under the Auspices of Washington Commandery.

The first of two stereopticon lectures on Southern Europe, by Sir Knight Arthur B. Commerford, under the auspices of Washington Commandery, No. 4, Knights Templar, was given Thursday evening in Masonic hall, the lecturer being introduced by Eminent Commander Clark Burdick. The stereopticon was in charge of Mr. William H. Young.

In opening, Mr. Commerford described the steamer on which he sailed from New York, and then the first stop on the sixth day at Madeira, Cadiz, Seville, one of the gayest and brightest spots in the world and the burial place of Christopher Columbus; Granada, with the wonderful Alhambra, the culminating point of the journey to Spain; Malaga and Algiers were also described. Genoa, Pisa, Nice and Monte Carlo were taken up in an interesting way and the last was Rome, the Eternal City.

Among other views were shown the Pantheon, the Villa Borghese, the Baths of Caracalla, the Appian Way, the Catacombs of St. Calixtus, the Scala Santa, the Forum, once the centre of civilization, the arches of Titus and Constantine, the Coliseum, the churches of St. John Lateran and St. Paul's, Without the Walls, Hadrian's Tomb, the Vatican gallery, St. Peter's, the greatest church in Christendom, and the Fountain of Trevi.

Mr. Commerford's lecture was interesting and instructive and must have been heard with gratification by all. Pleasant memories were recalled to those to whom some or all of the places were familiar, and a sense of anticipation was aroused in those who have not yet visited southern Europe.

After the lecture there was dancing until 1 A. M. A special car was in waiting at the foot of the street at that hour.

"THE BIGELOW'S BUTLER."

The Galahad Club Presents Well Acted Comedy Before a Large Audience in Trinity Guild Hall.

At Trinity guild hall Thursday evening the Galahad Club presented "The Bigelow's Butler," a comedy in three acts, before a crowded house. Before the play and between the acts Miss Bertha Titcomb played on the piano, and she also accompanied Smith's orchestra, for the dancing after the play.

The clever comedy was well acted by the following cast: Laurence Daubrey, Lord Carstairs (first known as Joseph Higgins, the Bigelow's butler), Carl Johnson; Joshua Bigelow, Louis Chase; Peter McBinnis of London (solicitor), William Foster; Alexander Saunders, (alias Slick Sandy), Manuel Jemail; Jimmy Ruggs, his partner, Joseph Lawrence; Rev. Samuel Corse, C. Grinnell; a police inspector, William Helme; Jarrocks, Charles Eberhardt; Frances Bigelow, Miss Stevens; Mrs Bigelow, Miss Cottrell; Hooper, maid, Miss Campbell. Special mention should be made of the work of Misses Stevens and Cottrell and of Messrs. Johnson, Chase and Foster. Credit for the success of the play, which should have netted a large sum for the treasury of the club, is due Miss Ethel K. Sims-Nowell, Mr. Clairmont Grinnell, the stage manager; Mr. Frank Bennett and Mr. Barrowe of Cloyne School, the students of which attended the performance in a body.
